G.O.P. Swings To Allied Aid On Eve of Convention

Plank Decries Involvement, Urges Strong Defense Program

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 23.—This candidate-overrun city prepared to open a Republican convention here tomorrow with the G. O. P. war cry still unphrased and the nomination still a horse race.

Day-long shirt-sleeved sessions brought a tireless resolutions sub-committee near the end of its search for a compromise antiwar plank, but not near the end of its troubles.

The initial draft of the plank now contains:

1. A vigorous declaration against American involvement in foreign wars.

2. A demand for effective national and western hemispheric defense, with a reassertion of the Monroe Doctrine.

3. An expression of sympathy for "oppressed peoples" resisting aggression, and for help, within the limits of international law, for those resisting aggression.

Coupled with this last point would be a charge that President Roosevelt is guilty of provocative statements tending to embroil this Nation in war.

Awaits Final Phrasing

The plank remains to be finally phrased and compressed to about 200 words.

Candidates were all on the scene, a dozen of them, but the inroads Wendell L. Willkie has made on the strength of the other 11 was the talk of the town as the entries lined up at the post.

Republican Chairman John Hamilton will call this convention to order at 10 a. m. Standard time tomorrow for a day of opening routine to be followed at night by music, song and the keynote speech by Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota.

The young Governor, his friends said, will lay heavy emphasis on domestic issues and a hemispheric defense policy on which Republicans can go to the country as the "party of peace."

"Unanimous," Says Landon

At 5 p. m. today a resolutions subcommittee which has been working two days to phrase a national defense and foreign affairs plank uniting divergent views, completed its preliminary labors.

It was called back at 7 to show former Gov. Alf M. Landon a closely guarded single-page early draft. Landon, as chairman of the group was to attempt to turn out the finished product in time for a meeting of the full resolutions committee tomorrow.

When the subcommittee adjourned for tonight, Gov. Landon told reporters:

All-Important Plank

This foreign affairs plank, which many here confidently believe will be an equal factor with the candidate in determining the November fate of the party, is the turbulent center of a party tug of war between extremists on both sides of the foreign issue.

William Allen White, the "Sage of Emporia" and chairman of the National Committee to Defend the United States by Aiding the Allies, arrived here today to back up Gov.

Colonies' Pledge To Continue Fight Reported From London

By the Associated Press

London, June 23.—Declaring the armistice terms accepted by the French robbed France of all independence, the British government tonight repudiated the government of Premier Marshal Petain at Bordeaux and announced it would henceforth deal with a French National Committee formed in London.

France's empire, the British said, has pledged its determination to carry on the war despite the surrender, and, in return, received Britain's promise of whatever financial assistance is necessary.

The statement on Britain's new attitude of nonrecognition of the Bordeaux government was broadcast in French after Gen. Charles de Gaulle, undersecretary of war in the Reynaud cabinet, announced over the British radio the formation of a committee to "assume direction of all military and administrative bodies who are now or may be in the future in this country."

Planes Flee to Africa

[Meanwhile, despite Germany's stipulation that the French fleet, planes, and armies must be surrendered, the flight of squadrons of French planes to Africa continued today, according to reports from the Balearic Islands.

[Furthermore, Swiss border reports said many French army units in the Alps facing the Italian frontier were heading toward Toulon, seeking a way out to North Africa.

[Nearly ten divisions (130,000) of Maginot fortress troops, who escaped the Alsace-Lorraine trap sprung by the Nazis when they drove to the Swiss border, also were reported en route to Mediterranean ports, but whether they planned to go to North Africa was uncertain.

Await Transports at Toulon

[Gen. de Gaulle's broadcast was reported to have made a deep impression on the French Alpine army, the Swiss dispatches said, quoting French sources to the effect that large units already had reached Toulon and were waiting for the naval commander of the port to get the transportation and convoys to African ports.

[A French radio broadcast heard in London Thursday said the vice admiral commanding Toulon had

Colladay to Ask D.C. Suffrage Plank In Platform

Philadelphia, Pa., June 23.—Edward F. Colladay, National Committeeman from the District, tomorrow will cite census statistics from five less populous States and two possessions in demanding a District suffrage plank in the Republican platform. He will propose:

"We favor giving the more than 627,000 citizens of the District of Columbia representation in Congress and in the electoral college."

Tragedy on a Highway

Mother of 3 Dead, Soldier Held in Auto Suicide Pact

Mrs. Ella Carroll, of 1418 Foxhall road northwest, 36-year-old mother of three children, was the dead partner of an alleged suicide pact last night, while a Fort Meade soldier, George Williams, 39, was held by Glen Burnie, Md., police on a charge of homicide.

A lonely stretch of road near the Fort Meade-Laurel pike was where death came to Mrs. Carroll early yesterday from monoxide gas piped into her auto from the exhaust. Williams, her partner in the auto, who told police he had pledged himself to suicide with Mrs. Carroll, regained consciousness about 2:30 a.m.

Finding Mrs. Carroll dead, Williams walked about a mile to Fort Meade, where he is a member of the Quartermaster Corps, and reported the tragedy to authorities. Military police at the Army post called in officers at Glen Burnie and Anne Arundel County authorities. Later Williams reconstructed events preceding the death in a statement to County Police Chief John H. Sauers.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Carroll and Williams attended a picnic given by soldiers at Fort Meade, it was said. In the evening they went to a tavern near the camp, and drank until 10:15 p. m., when they left in the auto, parking on a side road a short distance off the pike, according to the report.

Williams, according to Sauers, said he attached a hose to the exhaust pipe and ran the other end through a rear window. Williams and Mrs. Carroll, the story ran, sat in the

U. S. Offers Aid in Crushing Anti-Americans in New World

Copyright by New York Times

Montevideo, June 23.—The United States today notified all the American governments, as well as the rest of the world, it is prepared to cooperate with the other American governments in crushing all activities which arise from non-American sources and which imperil the political or economic freedom of the Americas.

The warning was enunciated by Edwin Wilson, the American Minister to Montevideo, in a speech at a luncheon given by the Uruguayan foreign minister, Dr. Alberto Cuani, for Capt. William C. Wickham and other officers of the United States cruiser Quincy.

Wilson said he had been authorized by the State Department to announced that such cooperation constitutes the intention and avowed policy of the United States Government. Here in the Americas, he said, "we have abundant resources and abundant man power to cope with the task. We are proud of the free and independent spirit of our virile peoples. We are confident of our power to meet and repel any attack."

The local Diplomatic Corps attaches great significance to the fact that Washington chose Montevideo as the locality for the visit of one of its newest and most powerful cruisers and for the occasion to announce its determination to help her American neighbors repress all dangerous anti-American activities within their territories.

Although both the United States and the Uruguayan governments are still stoutly maintaining the diplomatic fiction that the Quincy is simply on a good-will cruise, it is now known that the cruiser was hurriedly dispatched to Montevideo

British Critics Of Surrender 'Sadden' Petain

Churchill 'Not Best Judge of Interests,' Premier Declares

By the Associated Press

Bordeaux, June 23.—Crushed by a German armistice and still awaiting Italy's hard terms, France fought tonight to hold her useless lines of defense and through her aged premier, Marshal Petain, hotly replied to British criticisms of the peace.

The marshal said the French had received in a "saddened stupor" British Prime Minister Churchill's statements expressing "grief and amazement" at France's acceptance of German terms.

Churchill "is the best judge of the interests of his own country," but "not the best judge of ours," said Petain.

Churchill, the marshal added, "must learn that France "has husbanded neither its blood, nor its efforts. She knows she merits the respect of the world and it is through herself first of all that France expects to be reborn."

(While Petain was protesting what he termed the lessons by a foreign statesman, the British radio broadcast a statement that the British government "no longer regard the Bordeaux government as the government of an independent country.")

In declaring that Churchill is not the best judge of French interests, Petain added:

"Even less can he judge French honor."

The marshal put this query:

"Does Mr. Churchill believe that the French refuse to all of France the love and faith which they have given to the smallest parcel of their

U. S. Launches Plan to Train Defense Labor

Handling of 1,500,000 At One Time Possible; Classification Begins

A vast training program to supply needed labor for the rapidly accelerating defense program was announced last night by the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Facilities for simultaneous training of 1,500,000 persons can be made available, if needed, the commission said:

Establishment of schools in defense industries was called for, with workers already employed being given training and then being promoted, with their places taken by new men to be trained.

The 5,500,000 workers registered with the Employment Service Division of the Federal Security Agency already are being classified as to skills and States, the announcement said, and tests of skills of individual registrants are being prepared. A "substantial reserve"

3 Held as Police Check Woman's Story of Attack

Three men were held at Eleventh Precinct Station last night and a 32-year-old woman was at the Woman's Bureau while District and Prince Georges County (Md.) police investigated the woman's story of criminal assault by the men.

Just after dawn yesterday Privates J. J. Cullinane and M. T. Imlay passed an automobile on Wheeler road southeast just inside the District line. Their attention was attracted to the machine by a cloth which covered the license tag. Then, they said, they heard a woman scream and halted the automobile.

Inside they found the woman and three men, one 32, the others 28. When the woman told them she had been assaulted in an unfinished house in Prince Georges County, the entire party was taken in custody for investigation

Police said examination showed the woman had been assaulted. After questioning the three men signed statements which police said implicated one of them in the assault.

French-Fascist Peace Talks Held In Simple Quiet Outside of Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 23.—The last act of France's tragedy was ending tonight in a villa 12 miles outside Rome, where the French and Italian plenipotentiaries were in discussion. At 7:30 this evening the armistice terms were delivered to the French, and in all likelihood the decision will be given sometime tomorrow.

No one has doubted what the outcome would be from the moment the German terms were unconditionally accepted, since the Italian claims are naturally embraced in the sweeping surrender of everything France possesses. However, since that time the French colonies have taken an independent stand and that may affect the parleys here.

The Italian plenipotentiaries were Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the general staff; Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, naval chief of staff; Gen. Francesco Pricolo, chief of the air staff, and Gen. Mario Roatta, army corps commander. Premier Mussolini was not present tonight although he may be tomorrow.

Same Men Met Nazis

The French delegates were the same three who met the Germans at Compiegne—Gen. Charles Huntziger, Rear Admiral Maurice Le Luc and Leon Noel—plus Gens. Henri Parisot and Jean Marie Joseph Bergeret. Gen. Parisot used to be military attache at Rome and speaks Italian perfectly.

The Italians are making every effort to bring the negotiations to a swift conclusion in a quiet setting, without any of the drama and humiliation which characterized the parley at Compiegne. All concerned are working in the knowledge that the cessation of hostilities depends upon them, for the German dictum provided for the battle ending six hours after the Italian government had notified the German high command of the conclusion of the Italo-French armistice.

Djibouti a Nuisance

The great factor of the day for the Italians from the future military viewpoint is the announcement from London that the greater part of the French empire, including Tunisia and Djibouti, has pledged itself to carry on.

The neutralization of Corsica, which seems assured, is rather of

Roosevelt Studies Nazi Peace Terms On Way to Capital

Aboard Roosevelt Train En Route to Washington, June 23 (AP).—The London version of Hitler's peace terms for France were laid before President Roosevelt tonight by reporters, but there was no immediate reaction.

The terms reached Mr. Roosevelt after he had ended a week-end visit to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and left for Washington with Averill Harriman, the financier, as a passenger on his special train.

Harriman's presence gave rise to conjectures as to whether he or a member of his firm might be fitted in some manner into the defense program.

White House officials recalled that Harriman recently was a guest of the Chief Executive on a brief cruise on the Potomac River and that one of his partners called on the President last week. But they advanced no explanation for his being aboard the Roosevelt special.

Myron Taylor Given Transfusion

Florence, June 23 (AP).—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative to the Vatican, received a blood transfusion this afternoon after his wife and a surgeon and nurse had arrived by clipper plane from the United States.

The transfusion was given to strengthen him for a train trip tomorrow to Rome, where he will undergo an operation.

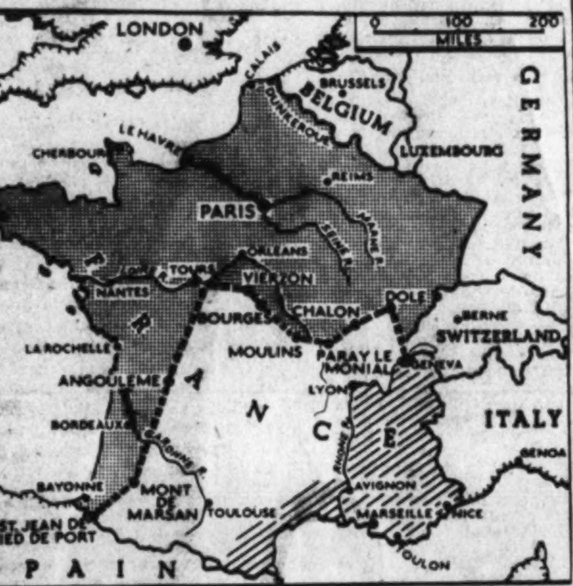
Summary of Armistice Terms Nazis Imposed on France



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THIS WAS FRANCE—Upper shaded area details the section of France to be occupied by Germany under terms of an armistice. Lined area at lower right comprises what Italy is reported to seek in separate negotiations. France would be left an inland island

By the Associated Press

London, June 23.—The following is a summary of the French-German armistice as issued tonight by the British Ministry of Information:

ARTICLE 1. Immediate cessation of hostilities. French troops already surrounded to lay down arms.

ARTICLE 2. For security of German interests, territory north and west of the following line to be occupied: Geneva-Dole Chalon-Sur-Saone, Partay Le Monial, Moulins, Bourges, Vierzon, thence to 20 kilometers east of Tours, thence south parallel to Angouleme railway to Mont de Marsan and St. Jean de Pied de Port.

The areas not yet occupied in this territory to be occupied immediately on conclusion of the present convention.

ARTICLE 3. In occupied area Germany to have all rights of occupying power excluding local administration; the French government to afford all necessary facilities. Germany will reduce to a minimum occupation of western coast after cessation of hostilities with Great Britain.

French government to be free to choose for itself the seat of government in nonoccupied territory or even to transfer it to Paris if desired. In the latter event, Germany will allow the necessary facilities for administration from Paris of both occupied and unoccupied territory.

ARTICLE 4. French naval, military and air force are to be demobilized and disarmed within a period to be decided, with the exception of troops necessary for maintaining order. Size and armament of the latter are to be decided by Germany and Italy respectively. French armed forces in occupied territory are to be brought back into unoccupied territory and demobilized.

These troops will previously have laid down their arms and materiels at places where they are at the moment of the armistice.

ARTICLE 5. As a guarantee Germany may demand surrender in good condition of all artillery, tanks, antitank weapons, service aircraft, infantry armament, tractors and munitions in territory not to be occupied. Germany will decide the extent of these deliveries.

ARTICLE 6. All arms and war materials remaining in unoccupied territory which are not left for use of French authorized forces are to be put in store under German or Italian control. Manufacture of new war material in nonoccupied territory is to stop immediately.

ARTICLE 7. Land and coast defenses with armaments, etc., in occupied territory are to be handed over in good condition. All plans of fortifications, particulars of mines, barrages, etc., to be handed over.

ARTICLE 8. French fleet, except that part left free for safeguard of French interests in the colonial empire, shall be collected in ports to be specified, demobilized and disarmed under German or Italian control.

The German government solemnly declares that it has no intention of using for its own purposes during the war the French fleet stationed in ports under German control except those units necessary for coast surveillance and minesweeping.

Except for that part (to be determined) of the fleet destined for protection of colonial interests all ships outside French territorial waters must be recalled to France.

ARTICLE 9. All information about naval mines and defenses to be furnished. Minesweeping to be carried on by the French forces.

ARTICLE 10. The French government is not to undertake any hostile action with remaining armed forces. Members of French forces are to be prevented from leaving French soil. No materiel is to be conveyed to Great Britain. No Frenchman is to serve against Germany in the service of other powers.

ARTICLE 11. No French merchant shipping is to leave harbor. Resumption of commercial traffic is subject to previous authorization of German and Italian governments. Merchant ships outside France are to be recalled or, if that is not possible, they are to go to neutral ports.

ARTICLE 12. No French aircraft is to leave the ground. Aerodromes are to be placed under German or Italian control. All foreign aircraft in unoccupied territory are to be handed over to German authorities.

ARTICLE 13. All establishments and military tools and stocks in occupied territory are to be handed over intact. Ports, permanent

German Armies To Occupy All Atlantic Coast Under Armistice

By the Associated Press

London, June 23.—Complete demobilization of French land and sea forces and German occupation of more than half of France were disclosed tonight by the British government as terms of the German-French armistice.

Beaten France, required to surrender her arms, munitions and Atlantic coastline, becomes virtually a passive ally of Germany for the Battle of Britain.

With final terms of the broader European peace envisioned by Germany and her axis partner, Italy, yet to be worked out, the armistice becomes effective six hours after French emissaries now at Rome sign a similar pact with Italy.

Fighting Continues

Meanwhile fighting continues until a cease-firing order is signaled by German radio with announcement that a French accord has been reached with Italy.

Italy's terms are still undisclosed, but a Fascist source at Geneva, Switzerland, indicated they included Italian occupation of the whole Mediterranean coast of France, and that after the war a semi-independent buffer state will be formed of Nice, Savoy and part of Dauphine.

[Authorized Berlin quarters refused to comment on the British reports of the purported armistice terms. "All that can be said is that the complete elimination of the possibility of France being any further military use to England is one of the conditions," it was said.]

Whether the French war fleet, which has been under virtual British command, would yield or be released to comply with the armistice remained one of the great undetermined factors of the war. Strong units of the French fleet have been assembled with the British in the eastern Mediterranean at Alexandria.

Must Sweep Mines

The armistice contained "solemn" German assurance that the French warships, ordered returned to port for German-Italian internment, would not be used against France's erstwhile ally, Britain.

In return, France is required to give the German high command "all information about naval mines and [illegible] which she undertook with Britain and to use her mine sweepers to clear out coastal minefields."

British political circles interpreted the armistice as meaning that if any French colony or single unit of the French fleet refused to obey German orders, Germany could denounce the entire pact.

They cited article 24, which says: "The present armistice is valid until conclusion of a peace treaty and can be denounced at any moment if the French government does not fulfill their obligations."

Pact Can Be Denounced

Observers added that once France is disarmed, Germany could impose whatever harsher terms she wished, and added that this was the same technique Germany used in taking Czecho-Slovakia.

An authoritative British informant, commenting on the terms as released by the ministry of information, declared:

"It is difficult to see how terms could be more humiliating or more

Dewey, Taft Managers Worried as Willkie Gains Delegates

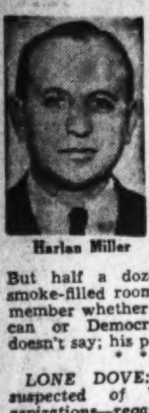
Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Philadelphia, June 24.

IN THE ELEPHANT TENT

JOHN'S PIQUE: Off the record, GOP bigshots explain John L. Lewis' latest blast at Roosevelt as a personal peeve because his own Presidential boom, which flourished modestly two or three years ago, has been so completely forgotten. John's self-esteem is wounded.



Harlan Miller

A few cynics thought his last speech was a bid for the GOP Vice Presidency. But half a dozen politicos in a smoke-filled room here couldn't remember whether he was a Republican or Democrat. "Who's Who" doesn't say; his politics is omitted.

• • • •

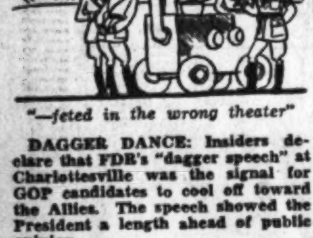
LONE DOVE: Another patriot suspected of Vice Presidential aspirations—regarded here not as a felony, but merely a misdemeanor—is Col. Lindbergh. His supporters are frivolously called Lindy's Cliveden set.

• • • •

WHITE HOUSE SPY: A New Dealer who says he is here incognito as an unofficial observer confesses that he feels a little like the American military observers in Germany, well treated but kept away from the shooting.

When Hitler blitzkrieged Norway, they were in southern Germany by invitation.

When Adolf invaded Belgium they were up north on the Baltic, getting very courteous treatment in a quiet sector.



"—feted in the wrong theater"

DAGGER DANCE: Insiders declare that FDR's "dagger speech" at Charlottesville was the signal for GOP candidates to cool off toward the Allies. The speech showed the President a length ahead of public opinion.

A member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee reveals that before this speech Senate mail ran 60 to 40 in favor of all nonbelligerent aid to the Allies. For 48 hours or so afterward a well-organized mail barrage ran 80 to 20 to slow up.

TAFT CIRCUS: So far I haven't seen the real elephant which one of Senator Taft's wealthy Ohio relatives wanted to send to the convention to put a little snort in the Taft candidacy. Taft was lukewarm to the idea.

"Will I have to have my picture taken with it?" he asked.

GUILTY: The most frequent exclamation you hear when a delegate or alternate spots a celebrity at the convention is:

NOT GUILTY: The next most frequent exclamation, when a celebrity is pointed out to a statesman from the plains, is:

"Why, he doesn't look a bit like his pictures."

"—Lindy's Cliveden set"

ALPHONSO AND GASTON: The architects of a Taft-Dewey coalition are having their troubles. Each one assumes the other is to be Vice President on his ticket. Unless age wins out over beauty, they may have to toss a coin.

• • • •

TEDDY'S IMAGE: One Willkie man is carrying around a photograph showing Wendell as the spittin' image of Roosevelt the First—big grin, out-thrust chin and all.

"He's the reincarnation of Teddy!" he says.

This makes some GOP elder statesmen nervous.

HOOVER HOODOO: If former President Hoover weren't jinxed by his 1929 collision with Coolidge prosperity and his 1932 defeat, he'd probably be nominated on the first or second ballot. About seven out of ten delegates seem to think he's the best man. But they want a virginal Hoover.

• • • •

PEPPER POT: John Hamilton hasn't lost an ounce of pugnacity and zip since 1936, but he no longer leads with his chin so often. . . . A hot-eyed reformer is hanging around lobbies demanding a plank against working wives . . . I heard a $5 bet made that if a tenth ballot is reached Joe Martin will be the nominee.

Connecticut Bloc Switches To Hoosier

Other Delegations Rush to Climb Aboard Bandwagon

Philadelphia, June 23.—The Wendell Willkie bandwagon, ignoring "stop" signs put out by the opposition, was picking up riders all along the line today as delegates poured into town for tomorrow's opening of the Republican National Convention.

Heretofore, Philadelphia has been described as a city teeming with Willkie talk, Willkie banners, Willkie managers—everything but Willkie delegates.

But tonight there are Willkie delegates, too, and the number is growing at a rate that has the managers of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft in a frantic state.

In the course of the day, Willkie picked up a solid bloc of votes that had been pledged to a "favorite son," raided a dozen or more other deelgations, reconnoitered virtually all delegations in search of bandwagon jumpers.

Baldwin to Second Him

Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, husky, red-faced "favorite son" of Connecticut, announced tonight that he would second the nomination of Willkie when the balloting starts Thursday.

That meant that Willkie would get Connecticut's 16 delegates votes on the first ballot.

The Willkie people were claiming two-thirds of the Massachusetts delegation, a good part of the New Jersey delegation (there were 20,000 write-in votes for Willkie in New Jersey's primary), all of the Rhode Island delegation, and large blocs in the West Virginia, Indiana and Wisconsin delegations.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, long a contender for the Presidential nomination, arrived hre to tell his supporters:

"I expect to get the nomination."

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, who has waged a campaign from coast to coast declared: "Nothing that I have seen since I came here has changed my mind."

Thomas E. Dewey, New York prosecutor, insisted:

"I'll have 400 votes on the first ballot. That's all I have to say now."

The Maryland delegation, pledged to Dewey by virtue of a preferential primary, was reported to be eager to leave the racketbuster as early as possible and jump on the Willkie bandwagon.

No delegation seemed safe from the Willkie contagion

Kansas Break Reported

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, the party's standard-bearer in 1936, was supposed to be able to do as he wanted to with the Kansas delegation. Tonight a break was reported in its ranks, with two delegates definitely gone over to the amazing Hoosier and others threatening to follow them.

Gov. Landon got one of the shocks of his life this afternoon when he looked into a dining room and saw the Kansas delegation throwing a cocktail party for Willkie. Landon had known nothing about it.

Incidentally, Gov. Landon tonight branded as ridiculous a published story that he was trying to get Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, to accept a place on the Republican ticket.

Powerful missionary efforts are being exerted to get Landon himself to abandon his reported prejudice to Willkie. The Kansan, it was learned, was an overnight guest on the yacht of Roy Howard, whose Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers is now whooping it up for Willkie.

The Taft and Dewey managers had scouts flying around town today and tonight trying to stop Willkie raids on their delegations

Dewey apparently was the heaviest loser in these depredations. He was supposed, for example, to have the Florida delegattion nailed down, but it was reported that fully half of the delegates from down there had gone over to Willkie

Bad News for Vandenberg

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, heard some bad news when Gov. Ralph Carr and his Colorado delegation arrived. The Colorado delegates were supposed to be in the Vandenberg column, but Gov. Carr said that he had "an open mind."

The Willkie strategists claimed the Colorado delegates for their own man.

Vandenberg, however, is regarded by many old-timers as the best bet for the nomination if Taft, Dewey and Willkie fail to make the grade.

Tonight Philadelphia truly seems wild about Willkie, but there is a growing undercover campaign against him. You hear it everywhere, but particularly in the jammed lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford.

"You can't stop somebody with nobody," argued a Willkie delegate there tonight.

G. O. P. Swings To Allied Aid

White asked to appear before the subcommittee after hearings had closed and told reporters he would like to advise them:

"Don't tie our candidate with any commitment on foreign affairs that would blow him out of the water in October with a change in foreign affairs."

Asks Flexible Platform

The veteran Kansas editor said the platform should specifically mention neither nonintervention" nor "aid" so it can be in a position to cope with changing world events as they come. White said the party should take the position of "doing everything in our power to keep the war from this hemisphere."

Advocates of a straight out "nonintervention" plank meanwhile threatened a fight on any compromise, and the Allied aid bloc appeared equally determined to talk unless the way is left open for assistance to Britain.

Delegations from 10 Western States and Alaska meanwhile assembled at a meeting called by Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, to declare for an ironclad nonintervention" plank and to demand reciprocal trade act repeal.

Senator Thomas told the Western delegations he "will not vote for any candidate if we pussyfoot."

Herbert K. Hyde, of Oklahoma, isolationist chairman of the resolutions committee which must approve the platform, pledged this group:

"I will do what I can to make our own plank noninterventionist."

Hyde, desciple of Borah, exhorted Republicans to "put our democracy in practice here before we undertake to police the world."

Midway between the two extremes, Gov. Landon, as chairman of the foreign affairs subcommittee, and former Senator George Wharton Pepper, head of the main drafting subcommittee, favor "proper" aid within international law to besieged democracies shy of commitments that might lead to war.

At a press conference late today, Senator Taft, of Ohio, declared that the country generally favors aid to the Allies and the question "is one of degree." He said he had conferred with members of the resolutions committee and believed all differences can be resolved.

Reports that Willkie was cutting heavily into the basic strength of other leading candidates brought a "hold that line" slogan from the Taft and Dewey camps.

Taft vigorously denied that Willkie is hurting his "primary" strength but conceded the booming utility executive might be wooing some of his "secondary" support. Dewey supporters insisted the New York district attorney's lines are "holding" and predicted victory on an early ballot.

Willkie, obviously enjoying uneasiness excited in other headquarters, told reporters he had support "in all but three States."

Meanwhile the enterprising utility executive denied he is intentionally trying to hold down his first-ballot strength.

"Everyone for me is free to vote for me on any ballot they will," said Willkie. "This is an unbossed convention. I haven't made any deals or trades and don't intend to."

Second ballot—215 to 250.
Third ballot—300 to 350.

Those estimates anticipate fast fading by Dewey and Taft, after the first ballot, and headquarters of both other leaders hoot it to scorn.

Their Wives Are Barnstorming For Taft, Gannett, Vandenberg

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, Pa., June 23.—Wives of three Republican candidates for the Presidential nomination set a new style for women in politics today as they barnstormed from hotel to hotel throughout Philadelphia, holding press conferences, appearing on the radio as "prospective First Ladies," and charming the multitudes generally.

With 309 accredited delegates and alternates to their credit—a gain of 26 over 1936—Republican women as a convention group seemed perfectly willing to sit back and let the wives take over the spotlight.

Whatever happens during the week, the opening bout—as far as women are concerned—belongs to Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. Frank Gannett and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg.

150 Interview Mrs. Taft

Sparkling-eyed Martha Taft went into action before half the trains were in and drew more than 150 correspondents, most of them men, to her first convention meeting with the press. She said all four of her sons would go to work at Taft headquarters Monday morning and listed three specific reasons why her husband should be made President. He is well qualified, she said, because of his brains, character and experience.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, delegate at large from Ohio, cheered Mrs. Taft from the sidelines and joined in the conference to go on record against intervention in the European war. She said she believed in full material aid to the Allies, however.

Senator Taft, whose conference followed his wife's, in the same room, smiled his approval of the feminine aid he has received in his race for the nomination and declared in favor of a "woman in the Cabinet."

Roosevelt Precedent

"President Roosevelt has established a precedent there that any Republican nominee would find it difficult to ignore," he declared.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Taft—and possibly Mrs. Longworth—Taft headquarters have arranged daily bridge lessons and games for "all convention women and wives of delegates who wish to come."

Additional new notes from this source include style shows at various times during the week. The Martha Taft street costume will be featured at the first show on Tuesday.

Although Mrs. Gannett has campaigned in only one State to Mrs. Taft's 29, she has the same quick comeback to all questions and the same go-getting qualities.

Accustomed to Public Speaking

Whoever is nominated, she declared, she "will be in there pitching."

"The past few months have convinced me I am something of a public speaker," she said. "I will continue to speak for the Republican Party."

Her three reasons for believing her husband would make a good President she listed as: 1. Familiarity with the European scene. 2. Success in business. 3. Forty years' acquaintance with public questions. Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey and Mrs. Wendell Willkie are conspicuously following tradition by staying away.

Mrs. Willkie is expected before the week is over, but Mrs. Dewey will not visit the convention at all—unless her husband is nominated.

Nazi Armistice Baffles Officials Of French Line

New York, June 23 (AP).—French Line officials, declaring they had received no orders from France, declined comment tonight on the future of the line's ships under the German-French armistice.

The war-retired 83,423-ton liner Normandie, second largest ship afloat and the French Line flagship, is the only French ship in port here. There were no signs of activity at her pier today.

No word had been received concerning the 30,000-ton liner Pasteur, which left New York last Monday with a cargo of gun equipment and ammunition.

Speculative reports have been published that French boats might be libeled in American court proceedings to prevent them from going to other nations, or that they might be taken over by British warships after leaving New York harbor.

Junior Chamber Delegates Leave

Their convention over, delegates of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce scattered yesterday in all directions—toward 44 States, Alaska, Hawaii and two Canadian provinces, with several hundred going to the New York World's Fair on a special train.

A total of 1,886 delegates attended the four-day convention, which ended Saturday.

Bombs to Fall Today On Plum Tree Island

Langley Field, Va., June 23 (AP).—Col. Jacob W. S. Wuest, commanding officer of the Langley Field Air Base, warned fishing vessels and other boats today to remain away from the vicinity of Plum Tree Island from 10 a. m. to 12 noon tomorrow, when units of the Twenty-fifth and Second Bombardment groups will conduct heavy demolition bombing.

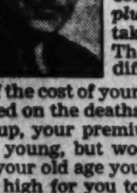
Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON

President, Institute of Life Insurance



A CORRESPONDENT writes me as follows: "Why do life insurance companies have reserves? I always thought they were to take care of unexpected disasters or epidemics. Something you said in one of your columns, however, made me wonder if I might be wrong."

You are wrong. Insurance companies depend on their surpluses or contingency funds to take care of such emergencies. The legal reserves are entirely different.

If the cost of your life insurance each year were based on the deaths during that year in your age group, your premiums would be low when you are young, but would steadily increase in cost. In your old age you'd probably find the premium too high for you to pay. It would be like a road starting out level but becoming steeper and steeper until you finally start sliding backwards.

But you don't want to give up your life insurance in old age when you may need it more than ever. Therefore, the mathematicians have figured out a way of establishing the same premium for year after year—a level premium.

This flat rate is higher than it otherwise would be during the earlier years and lower in the later years. It enables you to keep your life insurance in force when you're 65 at the same annual premium you started with at 30.

The company puts aside part of what you pay in the early years as a reserve, to take care of the slack in the later years. This is the so-called legal reserve.

UNDER the supervision of the state insurance commissioners, all companies keep reserves invested in sound securities for the benefit of the policyholders. The interest earned helps make life insurance lower in cost.

So, you see, the legal reserve is not just "something extra" to meet an emergency. It is created to make it possible for your company to pay you or your beneficiary what your policy promises to pay.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Willkie at Peak, Says Sullivan

By Mark Sullivan

Philadelphia, June 23.—This Wendell Willkie movement is an extraordinary phenomenon. The phenomenon does not lie in Mr. Willkie alone. Primarily it is a phenomenon of popular emotion, a phenomenon of the American people in their present circumstances.

Here are many millions of people, perhaps half the Nation or more—the whole of that portion of our people who feel not satisfied with President Roosevelt, or who having once thought of Mr. Roosevelt as a Messiah, have become doubtful.

These millions are troubled; they feel menaced by the most disquieting sort of menace, a menace mysterious, not understood; a menace that comes at once from abroad, and from disquiet about our now national circumstances.

Instinctively, and almost desperately, they look about for some one who knows what the course should be, and will lead them in it. By one figure of speech, much of the American people are like bees wanting to swarm. By another figure, they are like a mass of iron filings, each charged with the impulse to rush to a magnet—but with the magnet lacking.

At first, a year or two ago, they turned toward Mr. Dewey. He was not of Washington, nor primarily of politics. He was young. He suggested something new, and daring. And he seemed to have self-confidence, seemed to know the way.

Yet it is of the nature of this popular phenomenon to be transitory. It is mass emotion, and it follows the chart of any individual emotion; it rises, has a peak and ultimately wanes. The peak of feeling for Mr. Dewey was about last March. Had this Republican convention met then, Mr. Dewey would have had no rival of his own type.

Meanwhile, along came a newer figure, Mr. Willkie. He had much that Mr. Dewey had, and, in the eyes of many, a little more. But he did not need to have more. It was enough that he was newer. His rise, his emergence from obscurity began just about in March, the time Mr. Dewey was at peak. Now, today Mr. Willkie is at peak. It is Mr. Willkie's good fortune that the peak of the people's turning toward him coincides with the sitting of the convention.

What the thousand delegates in the convention must decide, among other considerations, is whether this remarkable public feeling for Mr. Willkie will last through the four months until the November election. It is quite possible for Mr. Willkie to last not only until the election, but for years. While popular emotion of the kind here involved is always transitory, its peak, its high level, may last a long time.

The delegates cannot confine themselves to considering, alone, who would be the best candidate. Their function is double, to select a good candidate, and also a good President. That Mr. Willkie should make a good President is conceded. Yet, in the minds of a thousand men, most of whom are in the world of politics, of public life, of government, the fact that Mr. Willkie's career has been outside that world has some weight.

The delegates feel, in a mood made serious by the times, that their obligation is to elect not only a President but a Government, including a Congress—a Government consisting of a Congress and President who understand each other and are experienced with each other.

For this broad purpose, if the convention confined itself to that purpose exclusively, there are candidates who, to many delegates, appeal more than Mr. Willkie.

Swing Toward Intervention Noted In Virginia Institute Students

Majority Favor Immediate Help For Hitler's Foes

Charlottesville, Va., June 23.—Students attending the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs expressed themselves today as favoring the sending of "Maximum military supplies to the Allies" and adoption of compulsory military training "for the duration of the present crisis."

Ten of the 30 students, who attended the institute from Eastern and Southern colleges as special delegates, said the ten days of institute addresses and discussions had shifted their opinion from the isolationist viewpoint to one more favorable to intervention, while four agreed that they had become more convinced in their isolationist point of view.

29-to-1 for More Defense

The students, taking part in an extemporaneous poll at the conclusion of the fourteenth session of the institute, announced the vote on the general questions as follows:

Do you believe we should build up America's national defenses? Favoring, 29; against, 1.

Do you favor immediate declaration of war against Germany? Favoring, 4; against, 26.

Do you favor sending maximum military supplies to the Allies limited only by our own defense needs? Favoring, 24; against, 5.

Do you favor our speeded up defense program? Favoring, 29; against, 1.

27 to 5 for Training

Do you believe in compulsoroy military training (A) for the duration of the present crisis? Favoring, 27; against, 5; (B) as a permanent national policy? Favoring, 9; against, 21.

Do you believe in the new notion of "universal national service" as a phase of military preparation? Favoring, 22; against, 9.

Dr. Morris S. Lazaron, rabbi of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation and executive board member of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said at the vesper services closing the institute that America was affected with a spiritual malady.

"We have failed to be indignant at evil and wrong," Dr. Lazaron said, "and evil and wrong have turned the tide against our souls to disintegrate and destroy them. We have sinned as individuals and as a nation. We have winked at truth, compromised at honor and have let others bear our burdens and suffer for them.

Defeatism to Be Banished

"Religion must energize the hearts of men to oppose evil and at the end it must throw its power into the balance for a just, unselfish peace," the speaker continued. 'Out of our sense of individual and national guilt we shall rise to banish the defeatism that plagues us. We shall return to the authority of the free spirit of man rooted in a deathless faith in God."

Prof. Hardy Cross Dillard, who is serving his second year as institute director, said the institute this year had a registered membership of 2,027 members from 36 States and 7 foreign countries. On the program were 68 speakers and 26 more members taking part in panel discussions.

570 in D. C. Area Get Age Pensions

The pocketbooks of 570 residents of Washington and of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Md., are being fattened monthly by old age and survivors' benefits, while 151 survivors of insured workers have received lump sum death payments under the revised Social Security Act, the Social Security board's Washington field office reported yesterday.

Monthly benefits, ranging from $10 to $63 a month, averaged about $25 in the year's first five months, said Victor Sadd, manager of the field office. Survivors' payments ranged from $60 to $240.

Father, Stepmother Vanish, 3 Children Found Alone in Flat

INTERVENTION—The City of Washington yesterday intervened in the lives of the Gregory children after police found them alone in a second-story flat at 1300 Fourth street southwest, Roy Gregory, 8 (center); Arthur, 2, and Shirley May, 5 (right), had seen neither father nor stepmother for more than 12 hours. They were taken by police to the Receiving Home for Children, where Roy said he hoped he could live "all summer"

Youngsters, Discovered by Police, Have Only Two Pieces of Sausage, Loaf of Bread to Eat; Say 'Daddy' Left for Store, Never Returned

Three children, ranging in age from 2 to 8, were found by police yesterday afternoon alone in their home, with nothing but bread and sausage to eat, and crying because they had seen neither father nor stepmother for more than 12 hours.

Privates Marcel Caussin and Richard Best, of the Fourth Precinct, took the youngsters—Roy Gregory, 8; Shirley May, 5, and Arthury Gregory, 2, to the Receiving Home for Children, after an anonymous phone call to the precinct station clerk, H. H. Thompson.

Roy, pupil at the Greenleaf School and spokesman for his brother and sister, told police he had not seen his father since he left their second-story flat at 1300 fourth street southwest late Saturday afternoon.

"Daddy said he was going down to the store," Roy said. "He never came back."

Roy, who said he was named for his father, told the officers his stepmother, whose name he gave as Marie, left home sometime Saturday night. Neither had been seen by the children since he related.

Caussin said he found the children "ragged, dirty and hungry and crying their eyes out." He and Best took them to the station at 2:30 p. m., where officers gave them sandwiches and milk from their lunches.

After their transfer to the Receiving Home, the children were bathed and given clean clothing, of which Roy and his sister were obviously proud. Shirley May repeatedly asked Roy to look at her new tennis sneakers and her dress with two pockets, while the brother told reporters his story.

"She has a dress just like that at home," Roy said, "except it only has one pocket."

The Receiving Home has been assailed for its inadequacies by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and members of Congress, but Roy said he liked it fine.

"Could we stay here all summer until school starts?" he asked.

The two younger children stood close to Roy. The baby whimpered until he took him on his lap. Shirley May listened intently.

"We Ate Bread All Day"

"When we got up this morning we looked for father and mother but they hadn't come back. I went to the ice box and found two pieces of sausage. I gave the smaller piece to Arthur. Shirley and I divided the other piece. Then we found a loaf of bread. We ate bread all day."

Roy said his father and stepmother frequently were away from home but that on every day but Sunday they were cared for by a colored maid. He said that on occasions the children were left in his care over Sunday but that until yesterday there always had been plenty of food in the house. Once, he said, the children were alone from Friday to Monday morning.

Roy said he was very fond of his father but "one thing I don't like is he leaves us."

He said he hadn't seen his real mother since Christmas.

There is a favorite toy, a wooden truck, back home that Roy would like to have at the Receiving Home. Shirley May asked for her set of dishes.

Miss Frances M. C. Bird, policewoman assigned to investigate the case, said her report would be made to the District Welfare Board, which might take steps to make the children wards of the city.

Vital Measures Face Congress After Recess

Full Calendar Is Looked For On Reconvening

By the Associated Press

Congress, having cleaned up all immediate "must legislation," began a week's recess yesterday amid expectations that vital new measures soon would go on its calendar.

With spending already at a peacetime record of $14,539,970,627—more than a third of it for armament—at least two other major defense steps appear in prospect.

These are a universal training program which President Roosevelt disclosed was under consideration, and a billion-dollar program of building Government munitions plants.

Reconvene July 1

The latter proposal is understood to have been strongly recommended by the National Defense Commission.

Much unfinished business already awaits the legislators when they reconvene July 1 at the conclusion of the Republican National Convention.

Senate committees will begin hearings then on President Roosevelt's nominations of Henry L. Stimson to be Secretary of War and Col. Frank Knox to be Secretary of the Navy. Unless the two Republicans can satisfy some doubting members that they are opposed to military intervention in the European war, a bitter fight may ensue over confirmation of the nominations.

Taxation is not a dead issue for the session, although both houses gave final approval Saturday to a billion-dollar defense-tax bill. In final form, this measure did not include a schedule of excess profits levies voted by the Senate, a provision which was stricken out after House and Senate conferees had agreed that taxation of this nature should be enacted later. The Treasury was asked to draft a bill by October 1.

War Profits Levy Expected

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, predicted that another large revenue bill, containing a war profits levy, would be brought before Congress within 30 days.

The Senate has yet to pass upon the Administration's $4,000,000,000 naval expansion program, pushed through the House Saturday without a roll call. This would authorize the mightiest fleet in the history of the world, to be construced over a seven-year period.

The expansion bill makes no provision for an immediate appropriation, but Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said that he would ask for $175,000,000 immediately to start work. This would be in addition to $5,377,552,056 in defense appropriations and contract authorizations already voted.

Training Bills Introduced

In disclosing that a plan for universal training was under consideration, Mr. Roosevelt made clear that he had in mind something entirely different from universal military training. He spoke of training for industry and for servicing the machines of modern warfare.

Legislation for compulsory military training has been introduced, however, in both House and Senate. As yet, there has been no indication of the Administration's attitude toward it.

Should Congress forego entirely a summer vacation—and there appears to be ever increasing sentiment for remaining in Washington for the duration of the war emergency—there unquestionably would be a renewal of demands for revision of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the wage-hour law.

Wagner Act Changes

The House has passed and sent to the Senate legislation making broad changes in the Wagner Act, and a series of proposed changes in the wage-hour law has received long study by a House committee.

Senators predicted today that the two-week period between the Republican and Democratic conventions—July 1 to 15—would be occupied almost entirely on that side of the Capitol with consideration of the Stimson and Knox appointments.

Congress will recess again on July 15 for the Democratic convention.

It is possible that Congress may be asked to approve a plan for a huge Western Hemisphere cartel which would conduct the major part of the export-import business between Pan-America and the rest of the world.

A program of this nature is reported under consideration, but no proposal is expected to go to Congress until some basis for agreement has been reached among the Pan-American nations.

New Postal Service Plans 7 Calls Daily At U. S. Buildings to Speed Federal Messages

By Edward Ryan

Despite a national emergency, Government officials will shortly be cutting down the number of urgent messages they send to each other.

This new paradox comes with the approaching end of an old paradox—all as a result of a special postal service which is being organized to serve Government officials in Washington.

The service was called for in the President's fourth reorganization plan, and it will start operating when the plan goes into effect June 30.

Vincent Burke, Washington city postmaster, in charge of setting up and running the new service, said that there might be some confusion for two or three weeks. After that he expects it to be faster, more efficient, and less costly than present methods.

Has Imposing Title

Whatever the chances of confusion, the new service is already outlined on paper—a ten-page printed document as neat and mysterious as any batch of railroad time tables. It discloses that the new departmental postal system will operate under the high title: United States Official Mail and Messenger Service.

The service will start with 56 trucks and 74 messengers, all assigned by the reorganization plan to the postoffice.

A representative of the Mail and Messenger Service will visit each Government office seven times a day at hourly intervals. (The interval between their fourth and fifth visit will be an hour and a half, to give time for lunch.)

This means said Burke, that when the service gets going a message sent from one Government department to another will be delivered within an hour.

In setting up the plan, Burke explained, the Government buildings were grouped in three zones, with separate headquarters. Central office for the first zone will be the Navy Postoffice Station at Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue, serving the area west of Sixteenth street and offices in Virginia. The second zone, with headquarters in the Benjamin Franklin Postoffice, includes the area south of H street betwen Sixth and Sixteenth streets northwest. The third zone covers the rest of the city, with headquarters at the city postoffice.

186 Stops on Schedule

Each zone is divided into about a dozen "runs", 34 in all. On any run a messenger will average half a dozen stops—186 stops are on the schedule.

The White House, right on the boundary between first and second zones, has been set down for the first zone. More exactly, the White House is on the schedule as stop No. 28, and it's on the fourth run. The schedule calls for a messenger to make his visits there at 9:26 a. m., 10:26 a. m., 11:26 a. m., 12:26 p. m., 1:56 p. m. and 3:56 p. m.

Sharing position on the White House beat are the Securities and Exchange Commission, State Department, and Federal Power Commission.

Barred from the special service are offices of the District government and the local courts, private residences and commercial establishments. This last provision, said Burke, extends to delivering Government press releases to newspapers.

In proposing the new messenger service, President Roosevelt cited the "paradox" whereby Federal offices were failing to use the facilities of the Postoffice Department, which he described as "the most efficient organization of its kind in the world." He added that the plan was designed to "reduce to a minimum the constant dispatching of messengers on so-called urgent and emergency errands."

Earth's Weather Found to Reflect Rotation of Sun

Rotation of the sun on its axis is reflected in a complex pattern by the earth's weather, according to a report by H. Helm Clayton, Smithsonian Institution collaborator, which the institution made public yesterday.

Sunspots are known to affect weather conditions. Since the spots are not equally abundant over the face of the sun, which has a 27-day rotation cycle, Clayton assumed their effects upon this planet would go through a 27-day cycle.

His statistical analyses bore out that assumption. The changing sunspot pattern results in a changing pattern of air currents on earth, an important meteorological factor.

Increased solar activity, as shown by sunspot numbers, he said, increases the flow of air from low to high altitudes, and from oceans to continents, in winter, and from continents to oceans, in summer.

According to Clayton, it is not the sunspot changes themselves that directly influence the weather, but something associated with them.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Mr. Cochran Makes Bid For Sherwood War Play

Wants 'There Shall Be No Night' for London; Five 'Summer Festivals' Listed for July; This, That and the Other About the Theater

ALTHOUGH IT IS highly speculative what English audience reaction might be to such a non-escapist play at precisely this time, Charles B. Cochran, famous British producer, is seeking permission from the Playwrights' Company to make a London production of Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night."

BELL

While no prospective actor for the Alfred Lunt part is mentioned, it is Mr. Cochran's wish to present Elisabeth Bergner in the Lynn Fontanne role on the other side—when, as and if the project takes definite shape. The Playwrights' Company has reached no decision as yet regarding the Cochran request—on behalf of Miss Bergner—for the British rights.

Miss Bergner, distinguished Viennese actress, long has been popular on both stage and screen on both sides of the Atlantic. Her introduction to New York audiences was in "Escape Me Never," presented in the Shubert Theater in January, 1935, after a tremendous London success, not quite duplicated in this country despite warm critical acclaim of its star. Translated into celluloid, the play was one of Miss Bergner's outstanding screen successes, along with "Catherine the Great," in which she completely eclipsed Marlene Dietrich's portrayal of the same character in Josef von Sternberg's overloaded and top-heavy production of "The Scarlet Empress."

Mr. Cochran's optimism, at least, is to be applauded. It is a dread possibility that night may fall on London before "There Shall Be No Night" can get there.

Speaking of the Playwrights' Company, Phil Stevenson, one of its more literate stentors, is spending the summer in Williamsburg, Charlottesville and other points in Virginia, where he is at work on a new play about Thomas Jefferson. He will pass some time at the University of Virginia gathering material. Upon completion of the piece he will return to his duties in the Playwrights' press department. On his last visit to Washington, Phil was tooting a pretty trumpet in behalf of Paul Muni in Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo."

The Community Center and Playgrounds Department, the office of National Capital Parks and Bess Davis Schreiner are all a-twitter lest it be not known that the summer festival programs for July, in the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, have been juggled about a bit. The five Tuesday nights in July now fall in line like this: July 2, the Washington Gypsy Chorus, preceded by the Washington Gaslight Band; July 9, FBI Recreation Association Theater Group in "Robin of Sherwood," preceded by the WPA Symphonic Orchestra; July 16, Tempo Choral Club, in "Merry Milkmaids," assisted by the WPA Dance Orchestra; July 23, Eckington-Roosevelt players, in "Kismet"; July 30, Troupers of East Washington Community Center, in "The Vicar of Wakefield."

Ten programs will be given during the summer, on Tuesday night of each week, beginning at 7:30.

There is more than meets the eye in that "New Year's" party being celebrated on the stage at the Earle Theater this week. In some of its aspects, it dips back a week and includes Christmas presents, all done up in gay ribbons, holly and whatnot. Our remembrance from Zone Manager John J. Payette was about the size of the base of the Washington Monument and just as heavy. It contained a one-note horn, a ditto balloon and a Christmas bell that probably will land us in the clink, but the heft was in the canned goods, which we are spooning out gratefully—with probably identical results.

Dots and Dashes

That Saturday midnight, two-hour, Hollywood broadcast in behalf of the Red Cross was worth sitting up for . . . Led off by Mickey Rooney, it included a million dollars' worth of stars, who seemed to be having as much fun as their listener-inners . . . As we remarked here not long ago, there seems to be no stopping this Rooney fellow—but you will have a tough time trying to pick his Dad, Joe Yule, out of the cast of "New Moon," coming along soon, with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy singing at their costellar best. . . . Tonight is the night the Roadside Theater breaks out Hoyt's "A Black Sheep" as the second offering of its season. . . . Bus from Dupont Circle at 8 . . . Over in Virginia, the Cross Roads is romping into its second week of Lynn Starling's "Meet the Wife," an antiquated comedy, undated by Catharine Ryan and Forney Reese . . . Sylvia Kaplowitz and her Kitt Accordionettes, winners of the gold cup as the most Popular act in the Capitol's 1939 "Going Native" revue, have left Washington for a summer engagement on Hamid's Million Dollar Pier at Atlantic City . . . That ought to make it worth two million . . . Under the auspices of Exalted Ruler L. Martin Young and Joseph Freeman, outing chairman, hundreds of Washington children will be entertained at Glen Echo Park on Wednesday, at the twenty-eighth annual outing of the Washington Lodge, No. 15, B. P. O. E. . . . The hoop-de-doo will get under way at 10 a. m. . . . The chief supplementary feature at the Columbia this week is "The Flag Speaks" . . . And when it does, it really has something to say.

War Balanced By Politics At Trans-Lux

G. O. P. Convention Shares Spotlight; Varied Short Reels

What with Knox and Stimson wiping the war news off the front pages, the screen bill at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week runs the gamut from the G. O. P. convention, in Philadelphia, to Lew (Dribblepuss) Lehr.

Across the silver sheet ride the pictures of the Canadians speeding up troop convoys to England, an Italian ship seized in the St. Lawrence River, Princess Juliana and her two daughters in Canada and a "special" of actual air combats that is sensational.

Fine are the pictures of the United States ships on South American patrol, the S. S. Queen Elizabeth taking on oil in New York Harbor, the S. S. Pasteur sailing, loaded with war supplies for the Allies, and Allied ambassadors conferring with President Roosevelt.

For contrast, you see Admiral Byrd and his party building their base in the Antarctic. Count Rene de Chambrun wastes no words in describing the great strength of the Nazis, while the new battleship North Carolina is launched at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. There is an American jubilee at the New York World's Fair and, then, the debut of the new New York newspaper, "PM."

Short Subjects Excel

The sports section of the program includes some unusually fine pictures of the Poughkeepsie regatta, won by Washington State's "Huskies;" others of auto polo and ski-jumping events.

In the realm of short subjects, there is a travelog on Colombia. It is a FitzPatrick in Technicolor, and it vividly describes the native customs and pisturesque beauty of Barranquilla and Cartegena. "Have You Met Yvette?" introduces a charming radio singer from Louisiana. "Screen Snapshots" is a real masterpiece starring Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy and a host of movie stars, all going "Western" in a big way.

Garbo Too Late To Get Her Gown

Garbo, attired in blue slacks and jacket and wearing a wide brimmed hat, walked on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot recently and left in exactly 5 minutes—a greatly disappointed woman.

It seemed that since making "Camille" two years ago with Robert Taylor, she always had a desire to some day own the white tulle, lace trimmed gown designed for her by Adrian, which she wore in the picture. But she was three days late, the dress having been remodeled for atmosphere use in added scenes for "New Moon," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy under direction of Robert Z. Leonard.

WENDELL WILLKIE was the guest of honor at a cocktail party in Manhattan. Among those present was former Congressman Hull, of Illinois, who now is counsel to a large distillery. Hull can influence the Illinois delegation to the Repeublican Convention, and finally agreed to exert that influence in Willkie's behalf, after the Presidential aspirant had answered two questions . . . The first question concerned Willkie's previous enrollments as a Democrat. Hull asked: "Will you definitely be a Republican, whether you get the nomination or not?" . . . "Definitely," Willkie assured . . . "If you are nominated and elected," was the second question, "will you definitely name to office none but Republicans?" Willkie vowed: "Definitely."

Eugene Rothschild, whose brother was ransomed from Hitler after the Anschluss, now is stranded in Biarritz. Friends who saw him there and who since have arrived in N. It concerns a Nazi consul in Rio. Miller purchased the play for $5,000.

ORSON WELLES finally made his first test for his first movie, "Citizen Kane." Ruth Warwick flew from New York to be tested for the leading role opposite Welles. This was the great moment for which RKO had been waiting for more than a year—the moment when Welles at last would appear before a movie camera . . . While RKO officials congregated on the stage to witness this historic event, Miss Warwick delivered the test line: "You're living up to your reputation, Mr. Kane" . . . The nervous Welles fumbled his reply, and so she tried again: "You're living up to your reputation, Mr. Kane." Again Welles fumbled, and again. At the eighth blow-up of Orson's line, Miss Warwick said: "You're living up to your reputation, Mr. Welles."

A FEW MINUTES before Welles made this first test a liveried chauffeur brought a huge flowerbox to the set. Orson opened it with great anticipation and found that it contained nothing but ill-smelling, decayed flowers. The accompanying note read: "I ordered these when you were going to start your picture, on October 10, 1939. I've tried to keep them fresh since that day.—Errol Flynn."

FRITZ THYSSEN, who fled from the Nazis he had helped put into power, is going to South America, to live with his daughter, in Rio. Thyssen's affairs here are being managed by Jacob Goldschmidt, the refugee banker . . . Selznick imported an English spy film called "Blockade," and engaged Raymond Gram Swing to supply an introductory blurb. The picture has been retitled, and Swing's job is finished—but Selznick isn't releasing the film, awaiting developments in Europe . . . Jerry Cooper has been signed for the Ed Wynn show . . . Nicholas Murray Butler's secretary phoned Simon & Schuster, to inquire why Butler hadn't received a copy of the new book called "So You're Going to College?" . . . The Marquesa de Cuevas, who put $300,000 into the Masterpieces of Art exhibit at the Fair—one of the finest extant—hasn't seen it yet.

IN CINCINNATI recently a group of eminent psychiatrists convened to help make a united contribution in easing the crisis now settling upon the country. Their contribution, they agreed, would be in the form of a beneficial treatment for the mass hysteria which is rampant . . . In the midst of their conference, one psychiatrist arrived late, and informed: "Have you heard? Paris is abandoned" . . . The treaters of mass hysteria immediately rushed out of the room and downstairs—for a drink to settle their disturbed emotions.

Which reminds me of Harold Lloyd's story of the doctor's wife, who many times had borrowed chairs from the local undertaker for her bridge club. Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 23 (INS).—You can count on the fingers of one hand the Hollywood directors whose names really mean something to moviegoers. Sam Wood, as a result of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Our Town," now belongs to that magic circle. So it is important news that he will go to RKO to direct Ginger Rogers in the much-publicized "Kitty Foyle." I can think of no one I'd rather see entrusted with Christopher Morley's engrossing best-seller. And the combination of Wood, Rogers and "Foyle" should really ring the box-office bell.

Pssst! Here's a real underground tip. Bette Davis' secret romance is Richard Nichols, with whom she fell in love during filming of "Ataht." There is no question that Hollywood has thrown itself heart and soul into the Red Cross drive and some mighty fine things have been achieved. Night clubs like Lamaze and Ciro's have sponsored raffles and benefits, with most of the top star names contributing time and cash. Many individual schemes for raising money have been concocted and carried through. However, there has been no coordination and as a result many who have already given generously are approached over and over again. To solve this problem and use to best advantage Hollywood's great eagerness to serve, Norman Davis, National Red Cross head, has just appointed Samuel Goldwyn general chairman for the motion picture industry. It will be Sam's job to coordinate all Red Cross money raising activities in the film colony.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Francis Lederer says he'll fly to Canada on business this week-end instead of to Mexico to see estranged wife, Margo. Apropos of reconciliation possibilities he says: "I have tried everything humanly possible to get back with her and from now on it is up to her" . . . Fred MacMurray and his sax, aided and abetted by a bunch of cowhands who appeared with him in "Rangers of Fortune," serenaded Sam Wood and family as they pulled out for Hawaii; Fred's fourth anniversary gift to the missus, by the way, was a huge amethyst ring . . . Judy Garland is seen around more than occasionally with Dave Rose, Martha Raye's ex. They were at the Lamaze three nights in a row and more recently at the Little Hungary. My guess would be no romance—just a mutual liking and interest in music.

Bill Powell's bride, Diane Lewis, feels slightly like a chameleon, having changed the color of her hair twice in two weeks. She lightened it to almost blonde, then got studio orders to darken it again for "Bittersweet" . . . it's pretty hard to surprise the blase natives of Beverly Hills, but a few were when Nelson Eddy peddled a bike down the bridle path . . . Jane Withers parties the younger set today to honor her house guest, Jane Reynolds, of Indianapolis. F. Bartholomew, J. Cooper, B. Granville and other 'teen-age celebs will enjoy a barbecue and a portable dance floor; Bonita, incidentally, has been dividing her dates between Alex D'Arcy and young Cooper, whose Palm Springs heart, Jimmie Rogers, has gone back to the desert. D'Arcy's getting some screen breaks, too, and was signed by Universal for both "Argentine Nights" and Dietrich's "Seven Sinners."

Virginia Bruce and J. Walter Ruben handed out dinner invitations to a bevy last Friday. No particular reason. Just wanted company . . . Shirley Ross, back from New York, at the Bev Tropics with hubby Ken Dolan. Mary Brian, ditto, at ditto spot with Walter Brooks 3d.

That's all today, but you may not be able to get rid of me for a few days more. I have a hunch L. O. P. is planning to retire to Marson's farm and practice the hula for a while before donning harness again.

Concealment of Truth From French Public Is Blamed for Defeat of Army

People, Even Now, Ignorant Of Nazi Terms

Half, and Probably More, of Trouble Laid To Misinformation

By G. H. Archambault

Copyright by New York Times

Bordeaux, June 23.—Military speaking the campaign is ended.

It has lasted six weeks, during which the French army, virtually unaided, has sufficiently proved its valor. In strict reality the battle was lost as soon as it began—when the Germans on May 10 forced the passage of the Meuse between Namur and Sedan. Since then there was nothing to be done beyond striving to stay the German advance so far as possible with an army inferior in men as well as in material.

Possibly the truth will be known some day—possibly not. At least half of France's troubles—possibly all her troubles—arise from the fact that the truth, the whole truth, has been concealed both in peace and in war.

Says the Journal this morning: "no secret is betrayed when we say that the British radio broadcasts in the French language. These broadcasts are heard by all those who have receiving sets, whether in occupied or free territory, even to the utmost confines of the empire. Thus the masses have learned all the details of the armistice signed in Compiegne Forest . . . Yet the French papers have not been allowed to give these details . . . French listeners have gained the impression that the whole truth was still being withheld from them.

"Deserved Better Than This"

". . . Both soldiers and civilians deserved better than this."

The first result of withholding the truth is to raise false hopes. Even at this writing some people are talking of resistance to the end by the French navy and air force—and correspondents cable such rumors to America. The second result is that when the truth no longer can be concealed it will deal a terrific blow to unprepared masses.

Will the truth ever be known about this campaign? Possibly not for many years. Even the preliminaries of the Battle of the Marne in 1914 are not fully known today; there are still documents at the Ministry of War inaccessible to historians; and controversy persists regarding the part played by Gen. Joffre and his lieutenants. Possibly it will be so in this case.

However that may be, the fact stands out that the French army did all it could—and more. But it entered the field unprepared for such a titanic struggle especially as regards material.

The men were prepared to sacrifice their lives; they were full of hope, as this correspondent can testify from successive visits to the front during the nine months of "expectant inactivity." Yet even then they said that on the material side the country was ill prepared.

Officers would say in private "All these ambulances arriving from various countries are very welcome, but a few heavy guns would be even more welcome." But no one was permitted to report such conversations.

Resources Lacking

It was possible to discern the fact that the attack on the Westwall begun in September was stayed because material resources were lacking. The inevitable consequence was that the initiative was soon abandoned to the enemy, a fact which weighed heavily on all the succeeding phases of the war.

There followed some light months during which efforts at the rear ought to have been multiplied and production of armaments increased a hundredfold. Manifestly they were not—for reasons that may become known in the future. One thing at least is clear already—the unbounded faith in the Maginot Line.

Another contributory cause of defeat was the woefully inadequate British assistance on land. Marshal Henri Philippe Petain revealed in his last broadcast to the nation that it never exceeded ten divisions. In Britain there was the same supineness as in France, the same complacency, the same playing at politics while the enemy was at the gates. Certainly the British navy and the Royal Air Force did sterling work but the fact remains that on land it was the French who bore the whole brunt—and that in a state of complete inferiority.

Gamelin's Blunder

In this campaign the two Allied governments claimed the prerogative of the general conduct of the war and that the high command was limited to the conduct of the operations indicated by the governments. For diplomatic and political reasons the governments decided to give immediate military aid to the Low Countries. For this the responsibility was theirs alone. In truth they could not do otherwise as democracies with a sense of honor.

Manifestly a grave mistake was committed by the high command in deciding upon the manner in which that aid should be given. Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, as commander in chief, ordered all his forces to advance simultaneously. This is precisely what the German high command had hoped. The retort was immediate and brutal; an avalanche of armored columns and motorized units was hurled at the weakest spot—the hinge between the armies in the field and those behind the Maginot Line. The forcing of the Meuse between Namur and Sedan decided the issue of the whole campaign.

Gen. Gamelin was superseded. History has no parallel for his sudden extinction—there is no other word. Adulated and raised on a pinnacle, "Our Gamelin" in the space of a few hours disappeared as if swallowed by an earthquake. His pictures were removed from public places, his name was no longer mentioned—it was as if suddenly he had ceased to exist. Manifestly his responsibilities were great. Yet the fact remains that he had been selected for the post by the civil authority and that it was that authority which determined the scope of the operations with the conduct of which he was charged.

As far as can be learned the weakest point in the alignment of the French forces was represented by the Ninth Army commanded by Gen. Andre Corap. Premier Paul Reynaud described it publicly as heterogeneous and ill prepared. Yet by the irony of fate it was this army which was assigned to defend the fateful hinge on the Meuse, and the war was virtually lost.

In the emergency Gen. Maxime Weygand was entrusted with the high command. This man of 73, vilified for years by certain politicians, was suddenly hailed as the "miracle man" who would save the situation as it had been saved through the centuries by St. Genevieve, Joan of Arc and Joffre.

The situation had gone beyond the scope of miracles. Weygand did superhuman things and kept his armies in being for many days. But it is manifest now that from the day of his appointment he sensed that the battle was lost. Everything depended on the reserves at his disposal. Complacent communiques and inspired statements induced the belief that such reserves existed. They did not. The fate of France was sealed.

An Undefeated Frenchman

Gen. de Gaulle Catapulted To World Fame in a Month

By the Associated Press

Charles de Gaulle is an undefeated Frenchman, sprung from nowhere to world notice in less than a month in a career to which the adjective "meteoric" justly applies.

GEN. DE GAULLE

On May 25, when Generalissimo Weygand fired 15 generals as a result of the German breakthrough in the north, he plucked De Gaulle from the obscurity of an infantry colonel and appointed him a major general. Before the war he was an advocate of a strong mechanized force—the kind of force that overwhelmed France.

On June 6, Premier Reynaud chose De Gaulle as his special assistant to look after war ministry affairs.

On June 16, when Marshal Henri Petain succeeded Reynaud, De Gaulle was kept on at the war ministry.

Angry at the French suit for terms from Germany, he went to England.

On Saturday, June 22, he broadcast an appeal to all Frenchmen to continue the fight.

On Sunday, June 23, he organized a French national committee to continue the war.

The defeated French government promptly dropped him from the cabinet for the Saturday speech and discharged him from the army for his Sunday action.

Stubbornly De Gaulle shouted over the British radio last night:

"The war is not lost.

"The fatherland is not dead.

"Hope is not gone.

"Vive La France!"

Physically, De Gaulle looks like the man to back up his ringing words. He is 6 feet 2 inches tall, is of strikingly handsome appearance, and is less than 50 years old.

Long before the war, at the risk of his chances for advancement, he dared to criticize the vaunted Maginot Line, in which most of the French War College put blind faith.

He even went so far in 1935 as to appear before the Chamber of Deputies to propose creation of 10 heavily mechanized army divisions. Reynaud backed him up, but the Chamber said no.

Tragic events have proved De Gaulle's gift for prophecy, and now he has appointed hmself the champion of a free France.

Armistice Terms Compared

By the Associated Press

A summary of the armistice terms of November 11, 1918, for comparison with those of 1940, follows:

[The November 11, 1918, armistice terms are not to be confused with the terms of the Versailles Treaty which Germany singned June 28, 1919. The basis for a comparison with Versailles will come when Germany and Italy negotiate their final peace.]

TERRITORIAL

German troops were to be withdrawn immediately from invaded countries—Belgium, France, Luxembourg—and from Alsace Lorraine, in the west, and From East Africa, and southeastern European territory of Turkey, Rumania and Austria-Hungary; Germany's entire Rhine section to be evacuated and garrisoned by troops of the United States and other Allies, with a neutral zone along eastern Germany from Holland to the Swiss frontier; Allied troops to hold bridgeheads at Mayence; Coblenz and Cologne; stores and supplies in the evacuated section to be left, undamaged.

Approximately 7,600 square miles of Rhineland were occupied by Allied troops. (Territory occupied by Germany in 1940 is roughly 106,000 square miles.)

In losing Alsace-Lorraine, which she had held since the war of 1870, Germany gave up after the World War 5,605 square miles and 1,700,000 population.

Disarmament

Surrender of the following material was demanded from the German army: 5,000 pieces of artillery, 25,000 machine guns, 1,700 airplanes, and other war equipment; all military supplies, fortifications, etc., in evacuated positions to be left behind in good condition.

Surrender of all submarines in operation and removal of crews from all others in port; surrender, disarmament or internment of all ships of the German war fleet; Allies to be permitted to occupy German naval bases and sweep German mine fields; all naval aircraft to be returned at once to specified fields and immobilized; all seized Allied shipping to be returned.

Repatriation

All inhabitants of countries invaded and held in whole or part by German armies to be repatriated within 14 days, including those held by Germany for trial, or convicted; all Allied prisoners of war to be turned over immediately to Allied officers for safe conduct to their own forces; all sick and wounded in German territory to be given care by Germany until their removal.

Treaties

Declared void at once were all treaties Germany had made with her wartime allies, and all terms and pacts she had made with countries who yielded to her.

Duration

The armistice was to remain in effect 30 days, with option to be extended. It could be denounced by either side—with 48-hour notice—if the terms were violated.

Camel Corps Raids Italians

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, June 23.—White-robed British Somali irregulars and fast-striking camel corps patrols have carried Europe's war across the white-hot desert frontiers of Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

Raids that started Saturday along 200 miles of sand-duned frontiers were aimed from British Somaliland at scattered, palm-fringed waterholes where Italian regular and native border guards are stationed.

At some points there were skirmishes, the British reported today, and native troops fled from one Abyssinian outpost before a camel corps charge.

The raiders withdrew after destroying the defense works and wrecking a water tower without which the position could not be occupied.

Natives Flee

Two hundred miles to the east another of the lightning raids struck an Italian outpost held by conscripted natives. The British communique said the natives tried to fight off the Somali attack for a few minutes, then fled, leaving one dead.

Egypt reshaped her government King Farouk accepted the resignation of Premier Ali Pasha after conferences with party leaders. It was understood that the formation of a national union government, solidifying principal political factions, was considered.

From bases along the Mediterranean, in Egypt, East Africa and along the Red Sea, British fighting planes and bombers roared out to continue pounding Italian troops, supply and naval targets.

[The Admiralty, in London, announced the sinking of another Italian submarine by light naval forces operating under the direction of the commander in chief of the East Indies forces.]

One plane of the Aden, Red Sea, command was credited with participating in the capture of an Italian submarine.

Other reconnaissance patrols scouted Italian East Africa—Ethiopia, Eritrea and Italian Somaliland—to pick new targets and provide information for thrusts over the frontiers.

Heavy bombs were dropped on supply centers in Ethiopia, and at Diredawa, on the railway from Addis Ababa to Djibouti, an Italian airdrome was attacked.

Attack Bomber

Fast fighter planes over the Mediterranean attacked a three-motored Italian bomber near Malta. They reported swarming around the big ship like hornets until it broke in the middle and plummeted into the sea.

The Italians struck back in repeated raids on Djibouti in French Somaliland, at Bizerte in French Tunisia and at British East African centers.

The British reported two Italian bombers shot down in the Djibouti raids. The crew of one was killed, and the crew of the second was captured.

Sicily Raided

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 23.—The British Air Force has apparently switched its attacks from the north to the south, according to today's official war communique, which announced that Trapani in Sicily has been bombed by enemy airplanes, causing 20 dead and 38 wounded, "including women and children and only 3 soldiers." During the raid two enemy airplanes were brought down, it was stated.

The Italian Air Force, said the communique, Saturday night bombed Alexandria and Bizerte. The Italian raids had for their objectives a British naval squadron in the Alexandria harbor and the coastal defenses of Bizerte. All Italian planes returned safely from this action, the communique said.

Other raids were carried out in the western Mediterranean during which enemy ships were attacked. One Italian plane was lost during this action.

In France the Italians claim a large four-engined airplane was brought down. In East Africa, according to the communique, one British plane was shot down.

Total May sales of $251,378,000 reported by about 24,000 stores in 34 States showed an increase of about 5 per cent over both the preceding months and the corresponding month a year ago. All three months had the same number of business days.

The volume of freight transported by motor truck reached a 1940 peak of 1,110,853 tons in May, the American Trucking Associations reported. This compared with 1,055,326 tons in April, and 991,486 tons in May, 1939.

The Wrong Approach

The new relief act which becomes effective July 1 prohibits the employment of Communists and Nazi Bund members on WPA projects. With the aid of affidavits obtained from workers, party registration lists and the facilities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and local police forces, it is expected that a considerable number of individuals will be identified as belonging to the banned groups.

This legislation is an unreasonable and ineffective approach to the problem presented by the activities of subversive elements constituting a threat to democratic processes. The WPA was created to provide jobs for the needy unemployed without regard to the political beliefs or partisan affiliations of workers. Groups working for the downfall of the United States cannot be curbed simply by dismissing their members from the WPA and leaving those organizations free to function under the protection of the law.

Congress lays itself open to charges of unfairness and oppressive discrimination by passing legislation which penalizes individuals because of their party or organization affiliations. It also imposes very heavy responsibilities upon Government relief officials by forcing them to pass judgment upon relief workers' political opinions. That is strikingly revealed by the statement of Col. Somervell, New York relief administrator, who proposes to "function as a court of last resort" in determining whether a person entertains subversive views.

There is only one straight-forward and effective method of dealing with the menace of anti-American movements and lawless activities. That is to pass general legislation specifically defining the kinds of activities regarded as inimical to the national welfare. Parties or organizations advocating forcible overthrow of the Government certainly should not be tolerated. Guarantees of freedom of speech do not give a man the right to incite people to commit lawless acts. Moreover, the Government should, as a defense measure, ban parties or organizations acting as agents of foreign powers.

Protective laws aimed at suppression of revolutionary and un-American activities should go to the source of this potential menace. The Dies Committee has collected a great deal of evidence, for instance, indicating that the Communist Party is subsidized from Moscow. A general law forbidding agents of foreign powers to organize political parties or to receive foreign subsidies for support of such parties, might be difficult to enforce. But at least it would offer more promise of a satisfactory solution than the legal discrimination which Congress has written into the relief act.

Taxing For War

The national defense bill, as passed by Congress, was shorn of two objectionable amendments which had been approved by the Senate without adequate debate, no doubt in expectation that they would be eliminated.

After rejecting the La Follette excess profits tax amendment, however, the conference committee announced that the Treasury had been requested to submit a substitute plan by the end of October, to be applied to 1940 income. Opportunity will thus be afforded for expert study and formulation of excess profits tax legislation designed to produce needed revenue and prevent undue enrichment of industries manufacturing for defense purposes without slowing up productive activity.

The Connally amendment, providing for drastic increases in individual and corporate incomes should war be declared, was properly deleted without recommendations for a substitute. There is no valid excuse for passing tax laws which would only become effective in future emergencies.

Legislation of this type might possibly have a sobering effect upon belligerent elements, since it would serve notice that a war would entail heavy financial sacrifices for noncombatants. But precise advance definition would be unwise, since it is impossible to anticipate what conditions might have to be faced should war come.

Furthermore, however great the revenue needs, it is essential to avoid too drastic levies. Even in time of war the process of saving and investment must continue if the Government is to be adequately supplied with funds through borrowing and if private industry is to be supplied with new capital to meet extraordinary production requirements.

In his commendable zeal to take the profits out of war, Senator Connally seems to have forgotten this important aspect of war finance.

The Republicans Meet

Seldom has any political organization in the United States given more thought to its platform than has the Republican Party in preparing for its national convention which opens in Philadelphia today. Yet the tasks of giving this statement of policy actual form and of choosing a standard-bearer to carry it out will severely tax the statesmanship of the G. O. P.

Nearly three years ago the Republican National Committee set up a program committee, headed by Glenn Frank, to explore the issues of the 1940 campaign. That group carefully analyzed Administration policies and attempted to ascertain the prevailing views of Republicans toward those policies. Last February it brought forth a comprehensive statement of Republican principles under the title: "A Program for Dynamic America."

With the results of this study before it, the G. O. P. resolutions committee has been in informal session at Philadelphia for a week, attempting to work out the general outlines of a platform before the delegates assemble. Undoubtedly this spade work will help the Republicans to state their aims clearly. But the task of laying a foundation for their 1940 campaign nevertheless remains one of the most difficult undertakings that party has ever faced.

Since the Frank committee made its report cataclysmic changes have come about in Europe and in international situations affecting the United States. Before the next President is elected in November other momentous changes, which cannot be foreseen at this time, will have taken place. The Republican Party is confronted by the necessity of taking a stand on which it can appeal for public support at a time when specific commitments may be obsolete or wholly out of place within a few weeks.

The problem of the G. O. P. is further complicated by the fact that policies are also undergoing rapid transition in Washington. A few months ago it appeared that the record of the AAA would be an important issue in the campaign. Now it seems likely that one issue will be extension of the AAA to all the Western Hemisphere. Coddling of individuals and groups with various forms of subsidies once seemed to be a powerful issue. But the President has recently advocated compulsory training of young men and women as a means of teaching them discipline.

In these circumstances it will be obviously impossible for the Republican convention to write a detailed statement of policy that could be expected to remain vital and significant during the next four months, to say nothing of the next four years. Even the most brilliant statesmen cannot prescribe a complete program to meet conditions which they cannot foresee. The best they can do is to adopt a set of guiding principles that will point the way toward specific policies as the future unfolds.

It is well to remember that the men who met in Philadelphia in 1776 could not outline a detailed platform for the States whose independence they declared. It was enough for them to proclaim the basic principles of free government and leave the details of future policy to be worked out on that basis.

If the Republicans meeting in Philadelphia today decide to employ this technique, they will have to guard against a platform of mere generalities. They will have to deal with basic principles as realities. They will have to outline a philosophy of government consistent with the necessities of national defense, with full domestic recovery and with the preservation of human liberty in an age of totalitarianism. But this can be done without indorsement of mere vote-catching expedients or indulgence in vague promises that cannot be fulfilled.

Even a platform built on guiding principles and policy trends will not be easy to write in this turbulent period. But that approach offers infinitely better prospects to the Republican Party than any concoction of political expedients designed to appease every group of voters.

A Haphazard Process

District officials were, of course, delighted with the sudden burst of speed with which both the Senate and House acted on various local bills just before Congress recessed on Saturday. It is always pleasant to see much needed legislation, believed to be lost, suddenly enacted.

If Saturday's performance is viewed from a longer perspective, however, it affords no cause for optimism regarding the status of the Nation's Capital. There was more of good fortune than good management in the swift enactment of ten District bills just before the legislative mill came to a temporary halt. If Congress had followed its original plan of adjourning last week, these bills would doubtless have been lost in the last-minute pressure for passage of national legislation.

Nor should we overlook the fact that most of these bills were sent to the White House without the slightest consideration of their merits or demerits by the Senate or the House. They had been analyzed by the District Committees. But when they reached the Senate floor they were simply sped on their way by unanimous consent. In many cases that means only that no legislator, aside from District Committee members, knew enough about the bills to offer any objection.

Actually a handful of Senators and Representatives legislate for Washington. And even these small groups are frequently not as well informed on local issues as a legislative body should be. Yet Congress continues to go through the motions of enacting petty regulations and transacting minor items of business for the District.

It is strange that members of Congress, seeing District legislation slip through their fingers in a perfunctory and haphazard way, do not come to realize that it could be handled much more efficiently and satisfactorily by a local body set up for that special purpose. But since Congress has thus far failed to see the obvious, the District has no alternative to continued reemphasis of its unhappy political lot.

Carol's About-Face

The situation in Rumania was far from enviable even before the military collapse of France which, together with Great Britain, was the guarantor of that Balkan kingdom's security. It has become very much worse as a consequence of that disaster. For Hitler is now, for all intents and purposes, the master of the European continent.

But King Carol has wasted no time in grieving over his nation's plight. In a succession of moves undertaken during the closing stages of the Battle of France and brought to completion while France was suing for peace, he has sought to bring Rumania speedily into line with Europe's new totalitarian order.

The anti-Nazi Party of National Rebirth, which for a time enjoyed a monopoly of political activity in the kingdom, has been scrapped in favor of a new Party of the Nation designed along Nazi lines. The Iron Guard has been rehabilitated and restored to royal esteem. Its members have been released from jail, its press has been given free play in expressing violent anti-Semitic and anti-Ally views and its leader was recently given an audience by the King. The bases of the new party will be "nationalistic, Christian and racial."

It is apparent that, faced by threats from the direction of Russia, Bulgaria and Hungary, Carol is looking to Hitler for support. In return for that support, which would permit Rumania to remain nominally independent, Carol is willing to transform his kingdom into a Nazi-satellite state. He is banking, and not without reason, on Germany's need of Rumanian oil and foodstuffs to keep war away from Rumanian soil. His about-face on domestic as well as foreign policy is the latest straw showing which way the winds of violence are blowing in Europe.

Wandering Windsor

When the historians sift through the abundant debris of our years, they will be more than human if they fail to pay attention to the pathetic figure who was for a time Edward VIII of England.

It was expected that the former King, as Duke of Windsor, would be quietly decorative, a member of the harmlessly futile international society which occupies the idle moments of press photographers. But lately he has become a more mysterious character, about whom not altogether wholesome rumors fly.

Soon after the war began, Edward was attached to the staff of Viscount Gort as a brigadier general. There were whispers that he did not get along with Gort. He was appointed a liaison officer between the British and French armies and transferred to Paris. There he was reported as consistently braving the hazards of the night clubs.

Early in May, minor Nazis in Berlin were telling their friends that a victorious Germany would return Edward to the throne. Later it was predicted that a revolution in England would accomplish the same result. That certainly seems doubtful.

On June 6 it was reported that the duke had "resigned" his liaison position. Two days later the war office denied he had quit "his military appointment," announced he was visiting French troops on the Italian frontier, and added that he would return shortly to "the headquarters of his mission."

That mission must have been in southern France, where he has a villa, for there he appears to have stayed until late last week, when he appeared in Barcelona. There were reports in Bordeaux that the American duchess would take a clipper plane for the United States. The Europe of her dreams is pretty well played out.

The Italian radio passed on a story that Prime Minister Churchill had ordered Edward's arrest on the ground of "hostility" to the British government. A Rome newspaper, reviving the discussion of a restoration to the throne, asserted Churchill had forbidden the erstwhile King to set foot in his native land. British sources dismissed these as canards, saying that "all possible steps" are being taken for Edward's safety, which in itself has a cryptic ring.

The duke said little, except that his plans for the future were "unsettled." The word is painfully descriptive of this minor character in the tremendous drama of our times.

Letters To The Editor

President's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hundreds (if not thousands) of red-blooded Americans must have been deeply moved by a letter writer's harrowing recital of the terrible effect that the President's Charlottesville speech had in Minneapolis, where (he says) "thousands of persons grew white in their faces as they heard the speech, half crying and half afraid."

It may be that people in other parts of the country are made of sterner stuff or have a keener perception of the implications of recent events than the reportedly timid and cringing citizens of Minneapolis, for they do not appear to have been similarly affected. Following the speech, I read many editorial comments from newspapers all over the country, and have since heard many oral expressions with reference to it, nearly all of which were highly commendatory.

On Peace Petitions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to a letter in The Post of June 19, I should like to say this: As far as I know, no petition signed by an "overwhelming majority of the student body" at Harvard University exists. There have been many petitions, but no single petition adequately expresses the opinion of the entire student body.

Several weeks ago a Boston newspaper ran a story which stated that a poll was taken among Harvard students the results of which showed that sentiment was 5 to 1 against aiding the Allies. I am a Harvard student and was never questioned. None of my friends were.

Vindicating Hoover

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Herbert Hoover is the only living former President. Probably all our Presidents have been misrepresented by their political enemies, but quite certainly no other has been the object of such villainous and utterly false thrusts as Herbert Hoover, and now, while he is still living, by all means he should be vindicated of at least some of the character-damaging charges of the falsity of which there is positive knowledge.

A Prophecy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this unutterable gloom after Russia masses troops in the Baltic and Poland? Obviously Russia fears invasion and will send no more oil to Germany. Rumania alone cannot supply Germany's war needs and, in addition, Russian planes can destroy the Rumanian oil wells overnight.

To complete the conquest of France takes oil, and a retreat to Poland and the Baltic will take even more oil. Add to this the conquest of England, a gamble, and, probably Germany would have little oil left, in which case Russia would control the air and could march through ruined Germany as easily as Germany by air control marched through ruined France.

Therefore, there will be no attempt to invade England, but, instead, a peace offensive, with England and France in a much more favorable position than is believed.

"Rich Beyond Our Deserts"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "In the perspective of history," says Mr. Walter Lippmann, "men . . . will wonder what happened to the Americans, in what manner their minds were duped and their spirits doped, that they were unable to pull themselves together and take measures to safeguard the power of their Navy, the Navy which is their first and only reliable means of defense."

Americans' minds have been duped and their spirits doped for many years, and the process has been accelerated for the past twenty. America was too easily won, and, once won, was rich beyond our deserts. We have had it all—land, wealth, the opportunity for happiness, bestowed by a bountiful God and bequeathed as a rich heritage by perhaps the finest group of political leaders who ever lived in one country in one period of history. They guarded for us all the necessities of a life of freedom—that freedom which is so much a matter of course to us that even now we cannot comprehend what its loss would mean. Freedom of speech, of person, of press, of religion—the words fall upon dull ears, just as the connotations of the word "slavery" awaken no answering feeling. Just so did they fall upon dull ears in France only yesterday.

When the historians come to judge our age, I imagine that they will see, with that long-range vision which is so often unhappily denied us at the time, that the real blinder over American eyes was a lack of spiritual vision. Lest that phrase seem frightening (how alarmed we become at the word "spiritual") let a simpler one be used—moral sense. Moral obligations nowadays are supposed to relate to an individual—if at all—but not in the least to a nation, and the simple truth is that that thesis has not worked and will not work, that cowardice and fear and selfishness will prove in days to come to be a potent force working toward the destruction of this nation.

The morally brave do not have to be fools in the affairs of this world, as some seem to think. Clear vision and bravery, as a matter of fact, go hand in hand, and how we do need both today! It seems safe to say that a little more moral courage on the part of the world's statesmen in recent years would have brought us to a different pass than we are at today.

For that matter, a nation is never founded, or being founded, does not exist, without courage. This Nation, founded upon brave ideals, and severely tested in the first few decades of its existence, drew many times upon courage. That stanch defense of American unity to date, the Monroe Doctrine, was never uttered nor invoked by cowards. That sort of men have had nothing to do in the past with the defense of America.

Fear, which leads to cowardice, is the handmaiden of selfishness. Let us compromise, we are told (as the British were told for years) with wrong: let us fear to speak the truth. Let us trim our defenses here and our conscience there; let soft words be spoken where plain ones are due, and even, on occasion, words which are somewhat on the shady side; at all events, let us be careful. Free men do not live that way, and neither, we are discovering, do free nations.

GLADYS PAVLAT.
Mount Rainier, Md., June 20.

Monroe Doctrine

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Congress has just passed by overwhelming vote a resolution making the Monroe Doctrine the law of the land. However, in this resolution only half of the original doctrine was reaffirmed: That section which characterized as unfriendly to the United States the transfer of any region of the Western Hemisphere from one European power to another. Significantly, the House rejected, 104 to 66, an amendment embodying the remainder of the doctrine: "That in the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part nor does it comport with our policy to do so."

The initial purpose and sole justification of the Monroe Doctrine was to protect this hemisphere from European imperialism. Such a policy provides no sanction for an aggressive imperialism of our own, even if it be under the guise of "hemisphere defense." The Government of the United States has no more right to establish air and naval bases in South America, or to meddle in the political affairs of neighboring countries, than those countries have to land troops at Norfolk or select the Republican Presidential candidate.

At the same time, the United States cannot properly demand that Europe respect the inviolability of the Western Hemisphere when America is actively intervening "in the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves." It will be observed that the Monroe Doctrine applies equally in reverse.

Ukrainian Plea

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following resolution, adopted by the congress committee of two thousand organizations of American citizens of Ukrainian descent as a suggested plank in the Republican platform, was read today before the resolutions committee of the Republican National Convention by former Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania:

"Congress of two thousand organizations of American citizens of Ukranian descent proposes that the Republican party insert in its national platform for 1940 the demand that the Government of the United States use its good offices at the end of the present conflict on behalf of a better order in the Old World based on American principles of democracy and self-determination for all nations, including 40,000,000 Ukrainians now under foreign rule."

UKRAINIANS.
Philadelphia, June 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your first editorial in The Post of June 20 is titled: "On the German Model" You follow this up with the next article advising citizens "How to Stop Worrying;" a splendid example reflecting muddled thinking of democracies who are being cashiered in—one by one—dictators whose thinking is straight and whose methods correct for their purpose. A better title for the first editorial could have been: "It Is Good, But It Is Bad," and for the second: "Now Go Ahead and Worry Your Head Off."

We should take a leaf from dictator's specifications how to win wars, be honest about imitation and treat such ventures as the skillful surgeon is treating his deadly vaccine by injecting it into a healthy body and thus immunize that body from a greater scourge. Does the editor really think that compulsory military training of our poor, lost youths who have no idea what to do with their time, for a year or two, will undermine our republic?

The Post Impressionist

Sammie Scuttles The Boss

Old A. W. was in a violent mood by the time he reached the office. He'd eaten too much the night before and hadn't had enough sleep. At breakfast he'd quarreled with his wife and, as usual, lost. A giddy spring breeze snatched his hat from his head and flung it into the stream of morning traffic. He had been acutely aware of the smiles and snickers of passersby during his frantic effort to retrieve it.

He strode into his office, threw the battered remains of the hat into the closet and looked about for something on which to hang his steadily mounting rage. His new secretary, already pale and worn after only four weeks of the Old Man, had her head buried in the files.

* * *

"Where's the daily sales report?" he demanded. "Why isn't it here on my desk?"

"It never comes up from Mr. Cole's office before 10," she replied.

"Ten!" he roared, "and we begin work at 9? Some more of Cole's babying the clerks, I suppose. What does he think I pay him for?"

He kicked back his chair. "I'll check up on a few things around here for myself," and he lunged out the door.

* * *

The switchboard operator winked at the reception clerk as he stormed through the outer office. "Look at our Donald Duck today!" she exclaimed, "out for a killing all right." And she began automatically setting in plugs to give the warning to her friends on the floors below that the Old Man was on his way down and in a lather.

A. W. cruised along the narrow aisles between desks in the general office. Even in a more temperate mood, it pleased him to make surprise visits on his workers, barking out orders and fierce rebukes. Thus he fattened his favorite illusion that the entire organization was at his fingertips and preserved his confidence in the personal character of his relationship with his employes.

* * *

He could not spot an idler immediately. Every head was bent conscientiously over a desk piled with work, but he felt the echoes of giggles and chatter which had died abruptly as he opened the door. His fierce old eyes roved about the room, hunting for a culprit on whom to pour the accumulating vitriol in his blood.

In the bookkeeping department he found one. An untidy boy in shirt sleeves lounged astride the low railing that separated the rows of desks from the outer corridor. He was contentedly gnawing the eraser off a lead pencil, and the railing rocked and sagged a little beneath his weight. A. W. felt the blood pound through his head as he lunged forward.

* * *

"You—you boy there," he shouted, "is that what I pay you for—to destroy my property? What's your name?"

The boy roused himself in stupid surprise. "Sammie," he stammered. "Sammie Ellis, that is . . ."

"That is you're fired," roared the Old Man, "and right now. What's your pay?"

"Nine a week," mumbled Sammie, backing away from the crimson face pushed toward his own.

"I'll clean you loafers out of here myself if Cole's too chicken-hearted to do it. Come along." A. W. seized the boy by the arm and jerked him toward the cashier's cage.

* * *

"I just wanna tell you . . ." Sammie whimpered.

"Tell me nothing. It's too late for excuses. Here," A. W. called to the cashier, "give this fellow $9."

The cashier smoothed his hair nervously. "I think, Mr. Knight, if I may . . ."

"You may not. I'll not have you fellows eternally interfering for each other. If you don't like the way I run my business you can get out, too."

The cashier handed out $9.

The Old Man gave it to the boy. "Now clear out," he ordered, his plump arms flailing the air.

* * *

Sammie fled as a straw before the tempest.

A. W. felt better.

The pressure in his head had eased up a trifle. Tom Cole was walking toward him, his thin face knotted with apprehension.

"Well, Cole, you say you can't cut expenses by getting rid of some of our dead wood around here, so I'll show you how." The Old Man contrived a pompous smile. "I just fired that worthless office boy, that Sammie Ellis."

Cole frowned. "But, sir, we have no employe by that name."

A. W. turned to the cashier. "That boy . . ." he began.

The cashier shook his head. "That's what I wanted to say, sir. That was the printer's messenger, and he was waiting for an o. k. on the proofs for our new order blanks."

Roosevelt's Concession

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt's statement to the French that the power to make military commitments rested with Congress alone was a temporary relief to those of us who, like Lindbergh, believe that we are being led into war. But would the statement have been so mild or, indeed, have been made at all if the third term had been assured? The New Deal has a record for circumvention and lack of respect for our traditions and institutions.

F. D. R.'s Gamble

By Ernest K. Lindley

The New Appointments

THE PRESIDENT took a gamble when he appointed Mr. Stimson and Col. Knox—especially Mr. Stimson. It is by no means certain that their inclusion in the Cabinet will not hinder, instead of strengthen, national unity, weaken the President's political position and make it more difficult for him to take the actions which he should take in the national interest during the next few weeks and months.

Mr. Stimson is 72 years old. Although he knows the War Department—or knew it 30 years ago—he obviously is not the person to put driving force into the rearmament program or to reorganize the Army. He is not new blood. He is an old symbol.

Mr. Stimson symbolizes policies which were, and still are, deeply distrusted by a great segment of American opinion. He symbolizes the League, the Kellogg Pact, indiscriminate moralizing about the affairs of other nations, economic sanctions, and related policies of a bygone day—policies which could never muster the support of more than a minority of the American people.

As Secretary of State under President Hoover, Mr. Stimson brought us to the verge of war with Japan over Manchuria, an area in which our national interest is negligible. He made us the spearhead of opposition to Japanese expansion on the continent of Asia. He did so without any apparent effort to enlist the collaboration of the Soviet Union, which was the other great power most immediately affected. Very likely the British and the French were shortsighted in not supporting Mr. Stimson. Mr. Stimson probably understood their interest better than they did—but, after all, he was supposed to be the Secretary of State of the United States, not the foreign minister of Great Britain or France.

SOME REPUBLICANS think as Mr. Stimson does. His presence in the Cabinet may muster their more vigorous support for the Roosevelt policies during the next few weeks and months. It may help Mr. Roosevelt in November, if he runs again.

But these gains to Mr. Roosevelt will not be met. There is scarcely another man who, because of his past record, would be more likely than Mr. Stimson to reopen old cleavages in the field of foreign policy. As an aid to national unity his appointment is in a class with making John L. Lewis chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

Col. Knox has no past record as Secretary of State to live down. He is a little younger and more vigorous than Mr. Stimson. If his appointment had stood alone it almost certainly would have been a net asset to Mr. Roosevelt and to the conduct of foreign policy during the next few months. His asset value may shrink, however, through the coupling of the name with Mr. Stimson's.

It may be unjust to hold Mr. Stimson's past against him. The specific methods of aiding the Allies which Mr. Stimson set forth last Tuesday in a Nation-wide address are probably not much beyond what American opinion is ready to support—or would soon countenance if convinced that they would be effective in saving Great Britain from total defeat.

THE STIMSON program is:

1. Repeal the Neutrality Act.
2. Throw our ports open to British and French naval and merchant ships for refueling and repairs.
3. Accelerate the sending of airplanes and other munitions to the Allies.
4. If necessary, convoy ships to Great Britain, to keep the supply lines open.
5. Open our doors to the children and old people of Great Britain.

If these actions would enable Great Britain to hold out, thus assuring that the British navy would not be scuttled or, even worse from our viewpoint, surrendered to the Axis powers, they would be an excellent investment on our part. If successful, they would enable us to continue to keep our main battlefleet in the Pacific as a warning to Japan not to grab the vastly rich Empire of Oceania.

It is doubtful, however, how effective Mr. Stimson can be in mobilizing American opinion behind such a program. The generalities and overtones of his speech last week were not reassuring to those whose thoughts have traveled along a different road—even though at the moment their road and Mr. Stimson's cross.

It is fairly clear, however, that in naming Mr. Stimson and Col. Knox the President was thinking much less in terms of the November election than of the action he will have to take before November. The future of Great Britain, the British Empire and the British navy probably will be determined before the election. If Britian holds until November, it will probably hold indefinitely. For by then American airplanes and other munitions will be coming to the rescue in greater volume. The appointment of Mr. Stimson and Col. Knox is notice to the rest of the world, as well as to our own citizens, that the President believes that the chances of saving Britain are good enough to justify our most strenuous efforts to do so during the coming weeks.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Revolutionary Days

CREIGHTON SCOTT, born in Brazil of American parents (his mother is the novelist Evelyn Scott), educated in Bermuda, France, the Sahara Desert, and here and there in the United States, has written a first novel called "The Muscovites" (Scribners, $2.50) and laid in Russia in the first days of the revolution.

This is a tale of young men with a sense of futility amid important events which didn't seem so important to them as they were happening, and it has a rather frightening air of applying as much to the America of 1940 as to the Russia of 1917. "The strange part of the revolution (in 1917, in Moscow)," says Mr. Scott, "was that you could avoid it if you chose, and were careful. Later this was no longer possible; but in 1917 you could go in and out of the revolution just as you could go in and out of the rain." Just as people in America today can still go in and out of the war.

Ivan Fomitch is a rather horrid young man who, having been disciplined by his father, who believed in self-reliance and foresight, had become timid, repressed, thoughtful and of small interest to anybody." Because his pal, Kuprin, a medical student, boasted so steadily of his amorous prowess, Ivan, who was afraid of women, imagined himself in love with a married woman with two children—and soon made the appalling discovery that the lady was taking him seriously. "The trouble with love," said Kuprin, "is that it is unscientific." For heaven's sake," said Ivan, "try not to be subtle."

IT WAS THE FAD among Ivan and his friends to regard themselves as unhappy, desperate slaves—slaves of their parents, their age and their passions. They were always planning escape to America, another revolution, or something else which they knew very well would never happen, and accordingly, they were desperate. "In 1917 if you were not desperate you were as good as dead."

So Ivan lived "desperately." He borrowed money from his successful brother, and through this brother was introduced to a job (the only way to get jobs in those days was to be introduced by some one who had a job); when conscription came to Russia, Ivan, with the aid of his medical friend Kuprin, simulated diabetes; and when revolution made life difficult, he sought escape to the Crimea, and rediscovered the married lady, who was taking her children to their father. "Where are we going?" said the youngest. Ivan shook his head and grinned, because he did not know.

It is a faintly unpleasant novel, but it has moments which prove that Mr. Scott can write as well as paint. His picture of an old school clerk registering young recruits for the army is a masterly photograph of red tape.

HARRY A. FRANCK (writer) and Herbert C. Lanks (photographer) strenuously and excitingly celebrate "The Pan American Highway, from the Rio Grande to the Canal Zone" (Appleton, $5). Between them they may make it almost impossible to stay at home this summer. The pictures are so alluring, however, and Mr. Franck is so infectious a veteran traveler, that enthusiastic readers might well have more conspicuously warned that much of the highway belongs to the future tense. If the authors, as the publishers say, have been over the entire route they describe, they must have used railways, burros and perhaps airplanes. The motorist who wants to follow them will have to put his car on a freight train from 150 miles south of Mexico to the Guatemalan border, and he is not likely to find his car useful between Salvador and Panama. Much of the book is a sort of lovely dream of an unrealized future.

On Imitating Hitler

By Dorothy Thompson

Sleepwalkers And Wideawakes

MR. LIPPMANN referred Saturday to the "sleepwalkers" in Philadelphia. Some of the Republican leaders are certainly sleepwalkers. But among them are some who are very wide awake. They fully grasp what is going on in the world, and they have a program. They do not tell this program to the American people. Instead they make a great to-do about not getting into war. I think it would be well to know exactly what that unuttered program is and see whether we want to go along with it.

FIRST OF ALL, when I say Republican leaders I mean the politicians who are the spokesmen for people who are not politicians, but who incorporate in themselves extremely powerful interests, with connections all over the world—financial connections and industrial connections. These are the "international capitalists" whom Hitler said had "made a coolie of Germany."

These men—they by no means represent the business interests of America, but represent only a certain number of very big interests indeed—are counting on a complete Hitler victory. They believe that this victory is in harmony with manifest destiny and inexorable natural law is that dog eats dog in this world, that the larger unit will inevitably consume the smaller unit, that this is an age of motors and mechanics, and that motors and mechanics mean huge economic complexes ruthlessly organized for the elimination of competitors, that political organization follows economic organization, that a huge monopolistically organized industrial nation like the German, consisting of managers and wageworkers, will inevitably conquer a middle class, freedom-loving, small economy type of nation like the French or a scattered commercial and financial empire like the British.

THEREFORE they are prepared for a totalitarian victory. They are also prepared to make a deal with it.

The deal will be the New Imperialism. America will arm to the teeth, and by exactly Hitler's methods—intimidation or war—become "master" of the Western Hemisphere. Hitler's Europe will need the products of the Western Hemisphere and will trade with it—American monopoly, with European monopoly, with Japanese monopoly. Every one will make a great deal of money, provided, of course, that America gets over some outworn and silly superstitions about civil liberties, personal freedom and humanism. These are sentimentalities. As Oswald Spengler so firmly remarked, "Man is a beast of prey." "I have said it before," said Spengler, "and I say it again: Man is a beast of prey."

I SHALL not moralize about this program, but there are one or two things that might be taken into consideration about it.

The tendency of monopoly is toward monopoly, not toward triopoly (if there is such a word), and in making the complete political and economic monopoly Hitler has a great head start and a far better system than it would be possible to set up in the United States of America. It is a better system for the purpose, because it is 100 per cent workable. Hitler could train his boys to shoot Norwegians by several years' practice on the Jewish minority first, while in this country it would be rather dangerous to practice on racial minorities, because each of us belongs to one.

Furthermore, in order to seduce middle-class people and workers into playing this game you have to have a popular leader capable of exciting the masses with a radical program, and those who want to trade with the new European empire on its own terms lack a Hitler and also lack the realization that they will fail utterly without the masses.

The middle classes of this country have also learned something, I trust. They are the people who put Hitler into power, and the other people have been completely eliminated by his program. And, finally, even the leaders who envisage this program and expect to become powerful through it will fail personally. They should take a lesson from Fritz Thyssen.

THERE IS going to be a tendency among people who think only in terms of power to believe that they can copy Hitler. They can't. They will merely deliver themselves over to him if they try. The basis of Naziism is not in this society. One cannot build anything, even a revolution, except on what is already there . . . on some existing tradition; you cannot import the basis. Hitlerism could not have happened without Prussian militarism and without a long, long series of German philosophers whose ideas had been popularized down to the intellectuals and finally down to the masses . . . ideas about master peoples, will to power, the army-state, the state of God . . . none of these things was invented by Hitler; he merely made a mass movement out of what was already in the German unconscious mind.

The American unconscious mind is something different. It is permeated through and through with the concept that the state exists as an instrument of men and not men as an instrument of the state; that manifest destiny is not something written in the stars, but what men collectively and individually will and work for it to be; that mechanics and motors were made by men and can be controlled by men, instead of men being controlled by mechanics and motors. Our popular hero is not Bismarck or Ford, but Lincoln. If we stick to American ideas and conceive only of programs which will express them, we shall at least be taking our stand on firm ground instead of on quicksand. I do not say that all these ideas cannot be eliminated; perhaps they can, by a ruthless system of education, if you get children young enough. But we are not going to have the chance to breed a generation of third-class Fascists; we are going to have to act tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow, and although we shall undoubtedly have to make very radical adjustments in our society, we had better make adjustments that are in harmony with the sort of people we are.

THE AMERICAN public is perturbed about what the Republicans are up to. They don't quite like the smell of things. I am writing these lines in Vermont, which is about as Republican as a State can be. It happens that there are a lot of Vermont workmen about the place—painters carpenters. They have been working here and up the road. There are also the people in the village. They wonder why on earth the Republicans are kicking because Roosevelt has put Mr. Stimson and Mr. Knox into his Cabinet. They are asking, quite disgustedly, whether the Republican Party is out for the Republicans or out for the United States. They all voted against Mr. Roosevelt in the last election—except for one or two eccentrics—and they have been very critical of the New Deal. But they say "Roosevelt made a lot of mistakes, but he was making them in the right direction."

I have found that out about youth, too. They write very candid letters to columnists and they don't think much of me because they think I'm too reactionary. But what seems to worry them about the war, and about universal service, is not being quite sure what the universal service is going to be for. If it's going to be for making the United states stronger, freer and a better place for all human beings to live in, that's one thing. But they aren't quite sure that it may not be used for the purpose of training Americans into Nazis, and they don't like that idea a little bit. In fact, they get quite ugly when they think of it.

They don't argue with Mr. Dewey, either, that the President is trying to drag us into the war. They think that the President has a simply terrible job on his hands. They aren't sure he is equal to it, but they aren't sure any one else is, either. And right now he has their sympathy. The next President, whoever he may be, will need their sympathy.

Reflections

France dead? . . .
Is music dead, or laughter?
Are things of the spirit dead?
Do love, romance, gayety, courage
And the will to live freely
Go down forever before steel,
Fire, force and hatred?

France forever done for?
Can the flaming spirit be done for?
Is tinkling music done for?
Can genius be done for.
Or the sound of children
Romping in a garden?

France vanquished? . . .
Can beauty be vanquished, or sunshine?
Can honor be vanquished, or faith?
Can a soul be vanquished?

France enslaved forever?
Can a sword enslave springtime?
Can a tank enslave dignity?
Can the fiercest bomber enslave
The miracles of nature?
Can all the legions of man
Enslave the songs of David?

France forever crushed?
Can summer be crushed, or the laws
Which turn the autumn leaf to gold?
Can the light of a star be crushed?
Can the images in a woodland pool
Be crushed?

France a vassal?
Is a note in the throat of the Nightingale a vassal?
Are the sounds from a ballroom.
Reaching a wooded patio on a
Golden moonlight night, vassals?
Is Joan of Arc a vassal?
Is the culture of Dijon,
Or Grenoble vassal? . . .
Are the spirits of Voltaire,
Montaigne and Loyola vassals?

France killed?
Can a gun kill a rhapsody?
Can brute force kill human hope?
Can a blitzkrieg kill Christianity?

France beyond resurrection? . . .
Is the scorched field beyond resurrection?
Is the flower beneath the winter's snow
Beyond resurrection?
Is the body in the tomb
Beyond resurrection?

Patience, France!
Courage, and faith, France!
And you shall see the stone
Rolled away and hear the words,
"He that was crucified is not here;
He is risen." . . .

The Real Test

Dr. Einstein has had to take an intelligence test to prove he is entitled to become a citizen. After that, all he has to do to satisfy this department that he is any smarter than anybody else is to read, understand and fill out an automobile registration blank.

A court rebuked a jury the other day for taking its place in the box in sport shirts without ties or coats. It's hard enough to tell a jury from the criminals, without making it any more difficult.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York was among those getting honorary degrees at Yale this year. We understand that when one of the speakers was referring to "the terrible conflagration in Europe," Fiorello put on his fire helmet and rushed for the door, exclaiming. "Why wasn't I notified?"

Prof. Billy Phelps described the mayor as a public official who knows how to blow up for the public good. "Sparky" LaGuardia, as it were.

Key Ring and Tangled finished in a dead heat in a horse race the other day. Can anybody say there is nothing in names after that?

Key Ring's jockey had an alibi. "There was no hole."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Ambitious Mr. Green

WILLIAM GREEN has asked the Republicans to promise that if they elect their man in November he will appoint a representative of the A. F. of L. to the Cabinet post of Secretary of Labor.

We cannot know who Mr. Green has in mind for this important office, but we are privileged to wonder whether he would prefer a graduate master of harlots, a stick-up man, a robber of widows and orphans of deceased union workers or a renegade cop convicted of bootlegging and since risen to high union office, with control of the funds of thousands of needy rank and file.

The official roster of the unions of the A. F. of L. is rich in criminal talents, and if none of these suggestions seems quite appropriate to Mr. Green perhaps he would prefer to name a common grafter, racketeer or thief. He has all kinds of rascals in the rogues' gallery of his organization, from murderers down to bluff, good-natured leg-breakers, stink-bombers and extortioners.

NOT EVEN in the files of the FBI or the guest book of Alcatraz could the Republican President, if any, find a more versatile array of criminal talent from which to select an officer in the Cabinet of the United States. And if it is Mr. Green's idea that a criminal should have the job, by all means let him be a union criminal with A. F. of L. credentials.

Mr. Green has positively indicated his approval of a low and vicious character in the leadership of the federation which he has the honor to represent. He so indicated when he appeared at the convention of the stagehands and amusement employes' racket recently and indorsed the administration of that charming instrument of brigandage, oppression and larceny whose strongest character trained for the task of bargaining agent as mackerel for a bevy of backroom belles and went on to a career in union extortion in Hollywood.

But all this is pure speculation. We cannot pry into Mr. Green's mind, although one may wish that he would give some sign of his preference so the country might know which gang and which type of crime the people are asked to vote for.

UP TO THIS TIME the criminal underworld has been represented in the Government only indirectly by a few Representatives and Senators who had relations with gorillas through their law offices and political organizations back home. Two Illinois Senators have had such connections, and a Representative sitting now is on terms of warm friendship with Ohio unions of the racket type. But never has the rogues' gallery been honestly recognized with a place in the Cabinet, and considering the power and influence of the criminal set in the A. F. of L. it seems only fitting that the appointee should be a man with at least one conviction for shooting a bartender in a stick-up.

Indeed, it is not hard to imagine that one of Mr. Green's faithful and aggressive subordinate leaders had a gun at his ribs as he indited his demand. For the influence of hoodlums in the A. F. of L. is now so strong and so plainly admitted that the leadership is afraid to throw them out or discredit them before the public and the rank and file. A member of his own cabinet, Mr. George Browne, occupies that rather uneasy position in the executive council of the A. F. of L., where he represents not labor or himself but the murderous gunmen of the old Capone or new Nitti gang of outlaws and defends them lest they bump him off.

MR. BROWNE, although unfortunately not equipped with a prison record, nevertheless, would make a creditable representative of gangsterism, for his relations with the criminal set are direct and openly avowed. He would combine happily in one person the qualities of the new type of A. F. of L. leader and the agent or parachutist of the mob.

Mr. Browne could case the joint, so to speak, for the gangsters of his following, open the doors from the inside and with the influence of the office of Secretary of Labor, could square the beefs of stricken rank and file and looted industries.

Norwegian, Belgian Officials in London Pledge to Continue

London, June 23.—What was termed the "breach of faith by the Petain government," it was said in an authorized statement tonight would be "bitterly resented and condemned" by Frenchmen overseas and on home soil who had been prevented from following the example of the other "victims of German aggression" who had decided to continue the struggle against the common enemy.

Nation Of Hostages

By Barnet Nover

France After The Armistice

TRAGIC as was France's plight during those fearful days when her armies were being cut to pieces by superior German forces, her plight today is more tragic still. At the point of the Nazi bayonet she is being compelled to dig her own grave as a nation.

That, briefly, is the meaning and significance of the armistice terms handed down to the conquered French by the conquering Germans. The French are not only to be disarmed and thus made incapable of further resistance. They are also to become the instrument of their nation's destruction.

The war is not over for the French, although it was peace they sought when they offered to lay down their arms. The war for them has only ended, and then only with reservations, in the military sphere. It now begins in earnest in the sphere of government, of thought, of civilization, only this time it will be a war not of Frenchmen against Germans, but of Frenchmen against Frenchmen and of Frenchmen and Germans against France's ally, Britain. And the French, however violent their anger and distaste at this grim role which Hitler has assigned to them, will have little choice but to do their new master's bidding. They have become a nation of hostages.

WHATEVER hope exists today for France's speedy restoration as a free and independent nation is to be found in the British will to fight on and the British capacity to withstand the Nazi onslaught.

If Britain, by a miracle of valor and fortitude, manages to hold out and by holding out to alter the military balance of forces, the hope of France's resurrection and, for that matter, of the resurrection of all free nations which have been crushed by the Nazi juggernaut will again burn brightly. If, on the other hand, Britain goes under there will be no hope left the French. They will have to live as slaves of Europe's overlord, buoyed up only by the realization that nothing is permanent in human affairs, not even the most efficient of tyrannies. But the sands will run slowly for them if the Nazis complete their triumph and fasten their system on all Europe.

IT IS, therefore, to Great Britain and her empire that all Frenchmen who love their country and who love freedom must look for salvation, if salvation is to come in the not too distant future. But with diabolical cunning Hitler has seen to it that henceforth the work of their hands will deny the wishes in their hearts.

By the terms of the armistice, as reported from London, France is to be hitched to the Nazi war chariot in its drive on England. French industry is to be used to replenish Nazi war stocks. Members of French forces are to be prevented from leaving French soil. No Frenchman is to serve against Germany in the service of other powers.

France is also to facilitate transport of merchandise between Germany and Italy across unoccupied territory, so that Hitler and Mussolini can better prosecute their joint war against France's late ally. And while all German prisoners in France are to be released, no French prisoners in Germany will be freed. They are more useful to Hitler where they are—as hostages.

APPARENTLY there is to be a little corner of France left unoccupied. This enclave, it appears, will have no means of egress to the sea, except over occupied territory. It will even be unable to use its own radio, for no wireless apparatus is to be permitted in that zone. Its government, one must assume, will be free only to obey orders and what these orders are likely to be can easily be imagined if we remember what has been happening in Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. There will be no place in this taken France for any Gambetta or Jaures or Reynaud, only for those who will agree to play Hitler's game.

In the meantime, and until a permanent peace is made, most of France, including the great majority of French industrial cities and all her ports will be occupied by the enemy. We know what happened in Belgium during the German occupation of 1914-1918. That was no exercise in generosity and self-restraint, yet the Germany of the Kaiser was angelic in its actions in comparison with the Germany of the Third Reich.

Indeed, in only two particulars did Hitler appear to show any regard for French susceptibilities. He did agree to allow the French government to return to Paris which, however, would at the same time be the seat of the government of occupation. And he gave France solemn assurances that the German government has no intention of using the French fleet for its own purposes during the war. How valid these assurances is questionable in view of Hitler's record. One may assume that these assurances were given, first, in order to get the French fleet back to home ports; secondly, because it would take some time before the French warships could be manned and operated by German sailors anyway, and thirdly, because the refusal of the ships to return could be made into an act of ingratitude on the part of the French and therefore as a pretext for reprisals.

Once disarmed France would be in no position to do anything about any Nazi violation of the armistice, anyway. On the other hand Germany insists on a unilateral right to denounce it any moment it deems the French government has not fulfilled its terms.

In comparison with the present armistice, the armistice of 1918 which so aroused German apologists to wrath, was an expression of magnanimity. The peace which France has bought from Hitler at so humiliating a price is the peace of death.

France Signed Truce With 40 Minutes to Go

German News Agency Describes Events Near 'Zero Hour'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 23.—France had only 40 minutes left to consider an armistice when she signed her truce with Germany, DNB, official German news agency, reported tonight.

In an account of the historic negotiations in Compiegne Forset, France, the agency said Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German plenipotentiaries, fixed 7:30 p. m. (12:30 p. m. E.S.T.) Saturday as the latest hour to complete negotiations.

Keitel's written communication fixing the deadline, in answer to an earlier French request for more time to consider the terms, was delivered to Gen. Charles Huntziger, head of the French delegation, at 6:30 p. m. yesterday.

Almost immediately, DNB said, the French announced they had reached a decision and the signing took place at 6:50 p. m.

The French requested more time five hours after the first talk between the French and German representatives, which began immediately after Hitler's brief proclamation was read at the start of the negotiations at 3:30 p. m. Friday.

The French delegates, without knowing their destination, had crossed the German operations border at Tours Friday morning and turned themselves over to German officers.

With the French army beaten—the sixth military establishment to capitulate to Hitler in 10 months—attention of the German people was directed toward a promised "New Europe" and the more important smash at England.

Blow at Britain Near

Berlin, June 23 (U.P.).—Germany will throw all her might into a "knockout blow" against Great Britain as soon as the armistice ends hostilities on the continent, informed Nazis predicted tonight.

They believed it was a question of only "a very short time" before Adolf Hitler, undoubtedly elated by the speed and efficiency with which his armies crushed France, would strike again.

Neutral observers were of the opinion that it would be launched after the German forces still driving south in France and those engaged to some extent with die-hard positions in the Maginot Line could be regrouped and taken to a strategic jumping-off place.

The German attitude was that, in view of demonstrations since May 10 of the Nazi ability to meet new problems, such at regrouping and redirecting would not take long.

It was held to be not inconceivable that even now, with the main French resistance broken and the end of hostilities imminent, some German troops already were taking up positions for the next move.

French Campaign Recalled

Near the finale of the Flanders campaign, before Dunkerque fell, it was pointed out, divisions already were wheeling about for the drive through France.

Left by the capitulation of France to fight alone, Britain will not have to wait long for the chance to show what right she has to the claim of being a world power, Diplomatisch Politsche Korrespondenz asserted.

In biting terms the organ denounced Britain for "continuing her irresponsible methods and at the twelfth hour trying to find fools ready to sacrifice themselves through efforts to reestablish England's lost glory."

As a democratic nation, Korrespondenz warned, Britain as a whole must be held entirely responsible for the leadership of her statesmen.

when Washington learned confidentially of the discovery of a Nazi plot to seize Uruguay and turn it into a German colony.

The discovery was not made public until three weeks later, the Congressional investigating committee having purposely delayed its report until the Quincy was almost here. It is learned from the cruiser's officers, who had not been pledged to maintain any diplomatic pretense, that the Quincy was idling off the end of Cuba waiting to take a party of naval engineers aboard for a cruise when it suddenly received orders to proceed to Guantanamo, take on fuel and food for a long tour of sea duty and to sail to Montevideo.

The Navy Department announced May 31 that the Quincy had sailed for South American ports when in fact it had only sailed hurriedly for Guantanamo and did not start southward until the afternoon of June 1.

Junior officers of the Quincy did not know where they were going until they read that Montevideo was the destination of the Quincy in the Navy's radio news bulletin. That Montevideo was the definite destination also was indicated by the fact that the cruiser's commander has not yet received orders beyond next Tuesday, when it is scheduled to leave Montevideo.

Wilson's statement that he was authorized to make this announcement indicates that the text of his speech had been submitted to Washington for aproval or, at least, that the text of the annnouncement itself came from Washington.

Local diplomats, therefore, see grat significance in the form in which the announcemnet refers not to invasion, but to all dangerous anti-American activities which endanger the economic as well as political independence of any American state. This is taken as covering all dangerous Nazi or Fascist operations within any country even when actual invasion is not conteplated.

Aid Only When Desired

Wilson was careful to specify, however, that assistance of the United States would be extended only when desired. The attitude of the Uruguayan government and people, since the Quincy's arrival, plainly indicates that any assistance from the United States will be welcome.

It is not so certain, however, that such assistance is desired by some of the other republics where Nazi organizations are known to be just as busily engaged in intrigue as in Uruguay.

"In confronting the dangers which threaten us all, Wilson said, "we can work more effectively if we work together. For more than 100 years the American republic have, happilly, been able to maintain themselves free from threat of foreign aggression. They oppose all intervention in their internal or external affairs.

"They are earnestly desirous of preserving the liberty for which they fought in the early days of their independence. Today these liberties are gravely menaced. We of the Americas must accordingly, reaffirm our strong determination to defend ourselves against any intervention coming from abroad to protect ourselves against poorly concealed activities which threaten our very sovereignty.

"I am authorized to state it is the intention and ovowed policy of my government to cooperate fully, whenever such cooperation is desired, with all the other American governments, in crushing all activities which arise from non-American sources, and which imperil our political and economic freedom."

Italians, French Speed Peace Talks

negative value since it was a great danger in hostile French hands, while even in Italian hands it would have been of use chiefly against France. Djibouti will be a disappointment but its value to the Allies is primarily as a nuisance. The British, with Aden, Berbera and Zeila can carry on without Djibouti, although with it they will have another good port and something that will cost the Italians more or less dear to capture.

The French plenipotentiaries will undoubtedly be in touch with their government at Bordeaux tonight and it is considered fairly possible that the negotiations will end sometime during the night.

However, the expectation is that, what with the discussions here, the transmission of the terms to Bordeaux, the study by the French cabinet and the re-transmission of its reply, the affair will drag on well into tomorrow.

Britain Next, Says Gayda

Writing in this morning's Voce D'Italia, Virginio Gayda, like all Italians, took it for granted that the next victim would be an isolated Britain.

"The collapse of France leaves her alone in the world," he wrote. "The Bordeaux government by their decisions have shown the world that they no longer have faith in British power or in its capacity to rectify the destiny of the two imperial democracies. Germany and Italy, without delay, will hurry into this new phase of the war, which will liberate them and all Europe from the weight of a tyrannical and intolerable hegemony."

No commentator of recent weeks has written an editorial without speaking of the "world revolution" which the Italians consider is now taking place. For them all it is going to be a destruction of liberalism, democracy, free trade and other institutions of western Europe.

Despite the stand taken by the French colonies, Italians continue to feel certain tonight that Britain is doomed. There is a witticism going the rounds of Roman society which was made by a central European diplomat:

"Petain has done what Napoleon could not do: He has conquered England."

Simple and Quiet

Today's historic ceremony was as simple and quiet as it could be made. The plenipotentiaries had driven to Munich last night and this morning they left in three olive-green and black Junkers for Rome.

The first plane had all Germans in it. In the second were eight French officers, a civilian and a woman. These were mostly the experts and secretaries. It was the third plane which contained the plenipotentiaries, along with two secretaries, one a man and the other a woman, and two German officers.

The scene of the preliminary parley is the Villa Manzoni, on the Via Cassia. The French went there directly from the air field.

Germans Capture Rich Booty In Shipyards of St. Nazaire

Two Battleships Under Construction At Port at Mouth of Loire; Nazis Claim Sinking of Tanker and Two Transports

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 23.—The fall of St. Nazaire, shipbuilding port at the mouth of the Loire, where France constructed some of her mightiest naval and mercantile marine units, including the Normandie, was announced today by the German high command.

The communique also claimed the sinking of a 10,000-ton transport and another of 4,000 tons by German fliers, and the sinking of a 16,090-ton Allied tanker, picked out of a convoy by a submarine.

The Capture of St. Nazaire with "enormous booty," including tanks loaded for transport, was accomplished, the high command said, even as Adolf Hitler's conquering army was pushing forward in the Rhone Valley in a southerly direction from Lyon and eastward.

Rhone Crossing Forced

"They forced a crossing over the Rhone at the approaches to the Savoyan Alps southwest of Geneva," the communique said.

"In the coastal region of the Atlantic Ocean, motorized units are driving forward at the ridge of La Rochelle," the high command said. (French communiques told of continuing German advances toward Rochefort, 20 miles south of La Rochelle and 80 miles north of Bordeaux.)

(St. Nazaire, familiar to thousands of American troops during the World War, is the home of the shipbuilding yards of the Loire Co. and Compagnie Generale Transatlantique—the French Line. It has important steel works and blast furnaces.)

2 Battlesips Abuilding

(The communique did not mention two 35,000-ton battleships, the Jean Bart and Gascogne, which have been under construction there. The Jean Bart was launched March 6 and was to be completed next year. The Gascogne was to be ready by 1942 or 1943.)

(Last week when the Germans took Brest, the Berlin newspaper, Der Angriff, said the army had seized two other 35,000-ton French battleships—the Richelieu, launched January 17, 1939 and scheduled for completion this year; and the Clemenceau, scheduled for completion in 1942 or 1943.)

Italians Begin Action

By the Associated Press

Monte Carlo, Monaco, June 23.—Cannon are booming from the snow-clad Alps to the palm-fringed Riviera shore with the Italians finally having started action against the French 12 days after declaring war.

Starting Saturday the rumble of Italian heavy artillery became audible at Mentone, Cap Martin, Monte Carlo, Roquebrunz and Monaco.

Immediately the French mountain batteries replied.

[The French night communique said: "On the Alpine front there is a continuation of Italian attempts to advance," but added that "on the whole we still hold our advanced positions."

[The communique this morning said Italian attacks "continued" in the Alps. "We repulsed them on all points in front of our resistance position."

Meet New Rear Guard

Chancy (on the French-Swiss Frontier) (Monday), June 24 (AP).—German motorized columns have succeeded in forcing a crossing to the east bank of the Rhone south of the Bellegrade Fortress and west of the village of Fragny, which is about 8 miles south of the western tip of Switzerland.

There, on the Savoy border, they faced a reinforced Alpine rearguard of French.

Inhabitants of Geneva last night heard the rumble of guns from the Alpine frontier south of Annecy, which is about 17 miles south of the Swiss border.

Bridges Blown Up

There French engineers dynamited all bridges between them and the German motorized forces on the Rhone who now have reached the mountainous region of the lower Jura Mountains and the foothills of the Alps. Deep gorges and winding roads are well defended by trained mountain forces plentifully supplied with artillery, antitank guns and ammunition.

Farther north, foreign legionnaires and soldiers freed from military prison still held Le Joux and Eclus forts, with their backs to the Swiss frontier.

Alpine Line Holds

Clashes yesterday between French and Italians on the Alpine front made no appreciable change in the line.

Cyclist Is Polite

Last Friday night three German motorcyclists whose crash helmets and leather jackets were almost indistinguishable from that worn by French soldiers, calmly whizzed into Bellegarde, which was filled with French troops, asked a policeman the way to the town hall, and politely informed the mayor he must consider the city occupied by Germany.

The astonished mayor said he had been told by the French commander that the city would be defended.

The German messengers bowed, explained that in that case the city would be attacked the next day, and sped away.

could be more shameful than to hand over material and territory for war against an ally with whom France has a solemn agreement not to conclude a separate peace."

The armistice grants the French government the choice of returning to German-occupied Paris or operating from any seat in unoccupied territory. On the French government was placed the burden of forcing millions of refugees to return to their homes in territory already swept by the blitzkrieg.

The Price of Peace

The price France paid for peace to Germany alone included:

1. Occupation:

German troops are to occupy all France north of a line from Geneva through Tours, and the French Atlantic coast south from Tours. The occupied area includes Paris and almost all France now held by German arms, in addition to the coast section not yet invaded.

France is to pay the cost of the occupation and administration of German control over such sections.

2. Demobilization:

French troops left in the German occupation area must lay down their arms at once.

All other military forces, land and sea and air, must be demobilized and disarmed except for a limited force necessary to maintain order

No further aid may be given Britain—and no Frenchmen may serve against Germany in the army of another power.

3. Naval demobilization:

Ships Kept in Port

French minesweepers are to clean up mined areas off the coast.

Merchant shipping must remain in French harbors until further traffic is authorized by Germany and Italy. Merchant shipping in foreign ports must be called home or sent to neutral ports.

4. Surrender of equipment:

Germany may demand surrender of all artillery, tanks, antitank weapons, aircraft, infantry armament, tractors and munitions.

Land and coast defenses are to be handed over in good condition in all German-occupied territory.

5. Prisoners.

France must release all German prisoners of war.

French prisoners of war will remain in German hands until conclusion of a final peace.

6. Communications and planes:

All French aircraft must be grounded, foreign aircraft in unoccupied parts of France must be surrendered.

Roads, trains, railways, and systems of communication must be turned over unimpaired.

All wireless transmitting stations in France must stop operations.

Fascist sources in Geneva, describing the Italian terms, declared the Axis powers had agreed that German motorized columns would not penetrate into the region east of Chambery and Grenoble.

Inactivity of the German forces in the Lyon area is due to this agreement with Italy, the Fascist sources said.

Savoy is divided into two French departments, Savoie and Upper Savoie, which were part of the Kingdom of Sardinia until the latter was annexed by France in 1860. The Nice area also was once a Sardinian province.

Savoy and Nice would be joined by part of Dauphine French since 1349, and ruled by an Italian prince, the informants said. The section of Dauphine east of Napoleonic road and running through Grenoble and Digne to the Riviera would be the connecting link.

((Ther is intense nationalis feeling among Savoyards of the two regions.)

French Here Doubtful

By the United Press

French sources said privatey last night they believed "true Frenchmen" would not capitulate to Germany, despite the action of Marshal Petain's government in accepting the German armistice terms.

The French Embassy declined to comment. It said it had received instructions from Bordeaux and had not received any orders to be relayed to French merchant ships in United States harbors. (One of the reported terms of the armistice is that French merchant ships outside French waters must be recalled.)

The State Department had "no comment," either on the armistice terms as revealed in London dispatches or on the announcement by the British government that it has broken relations with Petain's government.

Weather Man Grilled By Capital Hostesses

Three Parties Planned in the Country, Cloudy Skies Jangle Hospitable Nerves; Miss Harris Gives Picnic for Engaged Pair

Capital hostesses were busy calling "WE. 1212" all yesterday to check the latest weather report. With three parties planned out in in the country, and cloudy skies for a part of the day, nerves were slightly jangled at the end of the afternoon.

A picnic supper was given by Miss Aileen Harris for that popular engaged couple, Miss Jane Eustis and George Wheeler. Miss Harris is to be maid of honor at their marriage on Saturday. Guests were members of the wedding party, and included a cousin of the bride-to-be, Miss Marion Tapping, of Milwaukee, who arrived yesterday. The party was held at the Herndon, Va., home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Laing, brother-in-law and sister of the hostess.

Hostess Returns For Party

Pretty Peggy Tuckerman returned from Long Island, where she attended Elaine Darlington's coming-out dance on Saturday, just in time to give a buffet supper at her parents home, Tuxeden, in Edgemoor, Md. Sharing honors at the party were two debutantes, the Misses Catherine Clement and Molly Thompson. The latter, who is Peggy's roommate at the Cathedral School this year, will leave today to join her mother, Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson of New York.

About 20 members of the younger set drove out to Tuxeden at 5:30 for swimming and a game of softball before supper. This was served buffet style on the lawn. Among the guests was Miss Rosemary Morse, who is staying with Miss Tuckerman.

One of the gayest parties of the season was that al fresco supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Shipp at Ship's Landing, their place on the Potomac. Guests gathered at 5 o'clock while it was light, and had their choice of half a dozen games to play before supper. There was archery, badminton, rowing on the river, and pitching horseshoes, any one of which would be guaranteed to work up an appetite.

Ship's Landing extends for half a mile along the river front, and looks across to Mount Vernon and Fort Belvoir. The hosts' sheep, chickens and pigs give the place a real country air.

The hostess wore a simple cotton print in brown and white, and guests were told to wear anything they wished. Sports clothes were in the majority.

F. T. C. Officers In Group

A bar was set up on the lawn, and the ample supper included that Virginia standby, fried chicken, potato salad, enormous cold hams, and many another delicacy.

Ayres, and Garland Ferguson, Commissioners of the Federal Trade Commission; Mrs. Ferguson, Robert Freer, also a Trade Commissioner, with Mrs. Freer; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Weigester, Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Judge and Mrs. Oscar R. Congressional Pages Get Their Fill and More When They Dine at Uncle Sam's Expense

WITH WASHINGTON already in its doldrums Capitol Hill continues to hum like a bee hive with only the present week's recess as a respite. When Congress is in session at night—as in the past week—all of the little Congressional pages dine in the Capitol restaurants at the expense of Uncle Sam.

A group of these lads was enjoying this dinner privilege to the full the other night in the Senate restaurant. They had eaten right through the menu, to the evident alarm of their waiters, and had arrived at the happy moment of dessert.

One small boy, who was obviously a bottomless pit, suggested:

"Say, fellows, let's all have cantaloupe for dessert and," turning to the waiter, "with TWO scoops of ice cream in the middle of it."

THE WAITER demurred, thinking, perhaps, as much of the boy's health as of the restaurant budget. Whereupon the youngster simply hied himself off and put his case to Harvey King, manager of the Senate restaurant. Mr. King has a soul sympathetic to gourmets—even the nonpaying variety—so he sent the head waiter to see that the boys got just what they wanted. After which the repose of repletion settled over the page department of Congress.

RECENT VISITORS to Washington were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Codman, of Boston, just arrived from France. They called at the French Embassy to give the Ambassador and members of his staff the latest possible news of their families and friends.

Donna Julia Brambill is in New York after a trip to Detroit, where she attended the wedding of her nephew. After the wedding Donna Julia visited Niagara Falls—an appropriate thing to do after a wedding—going on to New York before taking up her summer residence at Hamilton, Mass. Later in the summer Baroness de Gruben and Countess Lasocka will visit Donna Julia at Hamilton.

HER MANY FRIENDS will be sorry to learn that Mme. Witold Wankowicz is leaving Washington to live in New York. The change of residence will reunite the family, as Witold Wankowicz, who was formerly Counselor of the Polish Embassy here, is now Polish commissioner to the World's Fair. Mary Wankowicz will continue her studies in Baltimore, where she is learning nursing in one of the big hospitals.

Mrs. Marion Warburg is in New York for a few days before leaving for the West. With her children, she will spend the summer at Dead Indian Ranch, in Wyoming. This rather sinister-sounding haven is reported to be 4 miles from the nearest postoffice, from which the mail is brought only once a week.

STAYING ON IN Washington for the present is pretty little Countess Naselli. She is visiting her mother, Mrs. Harry Wardman, and expects to be joined by her husband who will come here from their home in Mexico.

THE NAVAL ATTACHE of the British Embassy and Mrs. Curzon-Howe will leave Washington the end of the week and return to England, where Capt. Curzon-Howe will take up duty with the British navy. Both of them will be very much missed in the Capital, where his wit and good humor and her beauty have been bright spots in social life. Mrs. Curzon-Howe will be a great loss to the Red Cross, as she is one of the most capable and industrious workers.

Doris Neuman Is June Bride

The bride, who dispensed with attendants, wore ivory satin, a period gown made with a basque bodice, long tight sleeves and a circular train. Her white tulle veil, fingertip length, fell from a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a Bible with white orchids and valley lilies. She was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Neuman wore a dinner gown of Alice Blue jersey and the bridegroom's mother had chosen black chiffon. Both topped off their ensembles with orchids.

After a wedding trip to the West, the couple will live in Detroit. As her going-away costume the bride wore navy blue faille silk with a matching jacket and a blue hat trimmed in white. Out-of-town guests included the Misses Lois and Adelaide Ascher, Mrs. James Sheehan and Mrs. Thomas Sheehan.

ABOUT A VACATION...
... I've decided to go to Spring Lake Beach

I should know about where to have a good vacation because that's all I do. I get around to the sea-shore resorts, I've looked them all over, and selected Spring Lake Beach.

I like the hotels there because they are either right on the ocean, or so near it that the walk wouldn't bother even me. My public expects me always to look cool, and that's another reason I like the quiet, tree-shaded streets and porches at Spring Lake.

The splendid golf courses I will have to leave to others, but I enjoy going out with the sort of people who go to Spring Lake for the fishing. I hope they catch more of those nasty big tuna that scare me when I swim far out.

So I've looked over all the folders and decided on Spring Lake for this summer. The nice managers at the Spring Lake hotels will be glad to tell you lots more about this beautiful resort, if you'll address

A Woman's New York

Noted French Couple In U. S. Hide Tears With Gay Party

New York, June 23.

IF YOU want to see grace under pressure, said Gaffer Hall, pensioner of Miss Hughes, associate with some of the French people in New York or anywhere, and see how they carry on in these tragic times.

* * *

The madame and I spent a week-end at the lovely Westchester country home of Lilly Dache, the milliner, and her husband, Jean Despres, officer of one of the largest cosmetics firms. Paris had fallen, and her armies were on the edge of surrender. But the sun was shining in Westchester, and the host and hostess, though their hearts were heavier than anvils, were gracious and charming, and arranged a big steak-broiling under the trees on a hillside, and the gathering was gay.

Around the tables were beauteous Ucola Katzentine, of Miami Beach, and Lester Gaba, the designer, and Prunella Wood, the scribe, and Eleanor Lambert, the publicist, and her husband, Seymour Berkson, the newspaperman. And the slivers of elegant steak went round, and so did the white wine, and so did laughter. During the whole two days there wasn't a tear in evidence, though Jean's old mother was somewhere in the surrendered capital, and he hovered over the radio set for news bulletins.

SPOUSE ABOUT TOWN—It used to be the fashion centuries ago, oh, maybe 12 years, for a lot of our money-dripping men and women to go overseas and settle, returning only to reshuffle investments or brush off the current life partner. The rest of the time they spent sneering and blasting at their homeland, comparing us viciously with the culture and art of living abroad. You'd be surprised how this town is filling up with these volunteer exiles, actually eating American food and talking very amiably about the Good Old United States. I hope the home snobs are giving the returned snobs plenty of the old chill.

Right now the town's movie fans are raving about the movie version of "Our Town," and especially the work of pretty Martha Scott in the part she did on the stage. She was about the last one considered for the part, and now she seems certain of Hollywood stardom. That's the way the dear old movies are.

The duchess and I went up to the Savoy Plaza the other night for another load of little Hildegarde, the cute singer. There is no such thing as an overdose of Hildy. She tells us that she and her manager, Anna Sosenko, are writing an intimate musical show and intend to start peddling it to managers any day.

The women here are having the greatest success of their lives in putting their men-folks into gay play clothes this summer. The lads have always fought off this gaudy tendency as being slightly on the sissy side, but now even the Clark Gable types are beginning to appear at week-end in the shirtee-out sort of thing, in fairly bright colors. Even if you view it with alarm, these sporty things are preferable to olive drab.

Ample Food Costs Student 29 Cents a Day

90-Day Experiment Shows What Can Be On Limited Budget

By Ida Jean Kain

PLANNING well-balanced, health-giving meals on a highly restricted budget practically amounts to an art. One ingenious student, Ora-Blanche Burright, worked out a 90-day experiment of three meals a day at a total cost of 29 cents per day, including cost of cooking and refrigeration.

Thus she not only managed to eat well, but her experiment furnished the subject for a thesis which was accepted in partial fulfillment for a master's degree in home economics at Teachers College, Columbia University.

The daily menus totaled 2,500 calories, with 12 per cent protein, and 1,160 grams of calcium, 1.475 grams of phosphorus, 0.016 grams of iron and adequate amounts of vitamins, including one teaspoon of cod liver oil a day, which was covered by the 29 cents.

Used All Protective Foods

Through careful planning, buying and preparation of food, she was able to include in the daily menu all of the protective foods: 1 pint of milk, 2 fruits, 2 vegetables besides potatoes, 1 egg, a whole grain cereal and bread and butter. Her thrift tips will be of special interest to the business girl who dines alone on a budget.

To keep fuel costs to a minimum, food was put in as soon as the water began to boil, vegetables were cooked from 7 to 10 minutes, no soda was added and all the vegetable water was saved and utilized. In baking, the oven was turned off 10 minutes before the food was done, as it was found the oven temperature did not begin to drop appreciably before that time.

Since it is difficult to cook for one, there were many leftovers, so she worked out ways to use them. For example, when cooking potatoes she cooked enough for three meals; had them mashed the first night, used the leftover mashed potatoes for cream of potato soup the next noon and sliced the remaining cold boiled potatoes for salad for dinner.

Grade C Canned Goods

In selecting canned goods she found that the main difference in grades are the size and uniformity of the fruit and the thickness of the sirup. She choose grade C canned fruit, which is put up in thin sirup. Pink salmon is every bit as nutritious as red, but cheaper.

In taking advantage of canned goods sales she made sure there were no bulges or "swells" in the cans, but bent cans and torn labels do not impair the quality. She always watched for such bargains as five cans of spaghetti with cheese and tomato sauce for 25 cents!

Dried foods, such as prunes, lima beans, split peas, rice and yellow corn, were always purchased in bulk.

In buying fresh foods, weight, grade, nutritive value, freshness and keeping qualities were considered. The oranges used were size 176, sweet and juicy and averaging 3½ to 4 ounces of juice. The oranges had color added, but that does not affect the vitamin C content.

Menu Shows How

Milk was chosen as a protein food, because it is the chief carrier of calcium in the diet. Pasteurized grade B in parchment containers were used. Grade B eggs were used. Bacon was used because of its flavor and the fat saved for cooking. Canned soups were used liberally because of their cheapness. In preparing the soup the water saved from cooking the vegetables was used, thus increasing the mineral content.

Here is a day's sample menu to show how well one can dine on 29 cents per day.

COPR. 1940, HOUSEHOLD ARTS, INC.

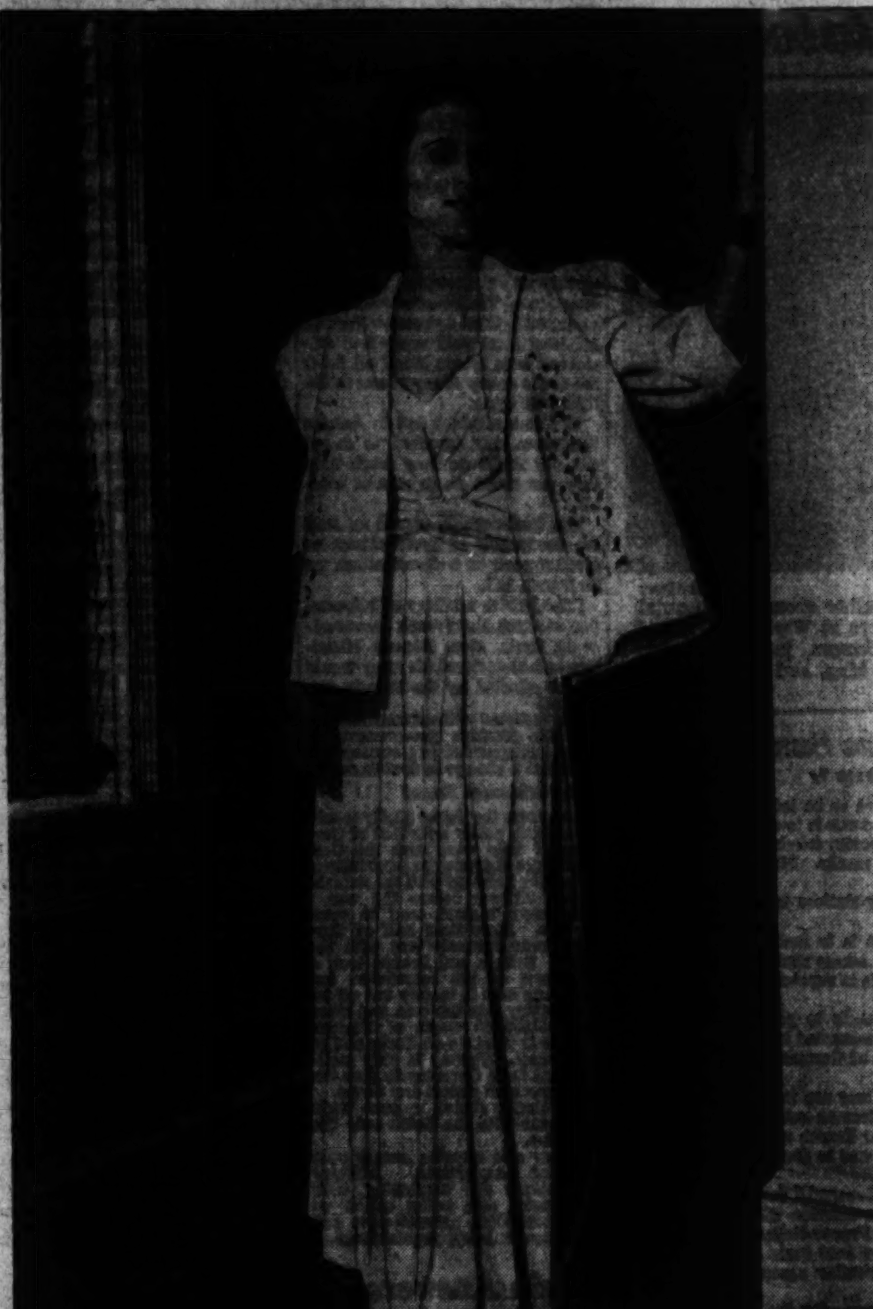
PATTERN 6724

By Alice Brooks

THIS lovely cloth in the favorite pineapple design is worked in two strands of cotton for a 72-inch cloth. Pattern 6724 contains instructions for making cloth in various sizes; an illustration of it and stitches; photograph of cloth; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Crisp, Cool Jacket for Day or Evening



Because the loose lines of this three-quarter length white pique jacket are casual, it is suitable over the daytime wash dresses, when the thermometer fluctuates. Yet the dainty open applique insets in the front panels make it sufficiently elegant to wear over dinner or formal evening gowns. Its starched whiteness would afford smart contrast with all-black frock, but Selma Meyers, Washington girl, wears it here with classically draped white crepe, and it makes, as you see, a stunning outfit

Patience Aids In Treatment Of Incurables

Humanitarian Trend Seen as Encouraging Sign in Medicine

By Logan Clendening, M. D

The humanitarian trend is one of the encouraging things about modern medicine. Not so much startling discoveries or sweeping methods of cure, but the patient application of help. People who 25 years ago would have been dismissed or shunted into the general catalogue of incurables, are are now being studied and aided by intelligent special groups of workers. They may not be 100 per cent curable, but it has been found that even apparently the most hopeless can be helped and at least given a new viewpoint on life.

One of the most distressing forms of crippling is the so-called spastic paralytic, whose nervous system has been injured at birth so that he cannot coordinate his muscular movements. We see these cripples everywhere, lurching and stumbling along the street, with slurred and unmanageable speech. Mentally they are, in most instances, quite alert, but their plight gives an entirely false impression in this respect.

Training Is Slow

They cannot be entirely cured because nerve cells once destroyed can never be restored, but areas of the nervous system which are still intact can often take up the work of the damaged sections, and be trained to do some of the useful work in life. They have to be trained slowly and carefully to make certain muscular movements and it is found that with this training they often can do so.

In a case of this kind, a mother taught her spastic son to move first one finger and then another. It was slow work, hour after hour. After the fingers she moved to the arms, the toes, and the feet. Eventually she transformed him from an almost helpless, lurching cripple to a human being who had about 50 per cent control over his movements.

Gains Confidence

At the Neurologic Institute in New York, a special clinic held for these unfortunates, teaches them slowly to make purposeful movements. They are taught to walk by focusing their vision on a chalk line on the floor or a painted point in the distance. A story related of one case is of a boy who was not able to walk at all until one day the clinic doctor, to his surprise, found him walking pretty well and noticed that he had on white shoes. The way his feet stood out to his eyes taught him how to use them.

Dr. Osler said once that "Most of us walk by faith." A great many cripples have to walk by sight but that is better than not walking at all.

Braised Kale, Rice Pudding a Flavorsome Twosome

FROM Evansville, Ind., a few days ago came Mr. Ralph H. Missman, in the interest of flour. He was a guest at the Washington Hotel and while sitting on the promenade deck of the roof said, "if this is a sample of the 'terrible' hot weather of Washington, I could consider exchanging the banks of the Ohio for the Potomac." Nature was at her best—for a summer day. One of the lovely dining spots in the summer is the Washington roof. There is a superb view sweeping down past the Washington Monument, the Jefferson Memorial construction, the Potomac, the Arlington, the new airport and other scenery.

When the temperature is soaring, water runs over the promenade canopy and trickles down, not only making it seem cooler but cooling it. The view, general atmosphere, interesting people and delicious food all blend to invite such luncheon guests as I observed—Justice Frank Murphy, Mr. Sam Jones and Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

Being the kind of day to put an edge on the appetite the luncheon guests were interested in hearty food. Although I don't relish being in the "snooper" class, I do observe the food choice of others. I noted that Mr. McNutt chose chilled cantaloupe, broiled milk-fed T-bone steak, complete with braised kale and hash brown potatoes, rice-fig pudding, and iced coffee. I know that the melon, steak, kale and potatoes were an excellent choice for I ordered these same foods, although my dessert vote was for deep dish cherry pie.

I don't think I ever ate the Scotch vegetable—kale—when it had a more distinctive flavor. Cattaneo, the chef at the Washington, gave me his method of preparing it and also the recipe for the rice-fig pudding.

BRAISED KALE

Saute in skillet some minced onion and chopped smoke ham. Next add raw green kale and moisten with brown gravy. A ham bone may be added to give flavor. Cover the entire dish with the skin from the ham bone, if available, and cook for 45 minutes at 250 degrees.

RICE FIG PUDDING

Cook 2-3 cup rice. Drain it and rinse with cold water. Combine, beat well and add 1 1-3 cups milk, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 3½ tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 2 eggs. Then add ½ cup chopped figs. Mix all ingrediants lightly with a fork. Grease a baking dish and put the mixture into it. Bake the pudding in a moderate oven, 325 degrees until it is set. Serve with cream, hot Sherry sauce or fruit sauce.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Sun-tan Makeup

SUN-TAN skins and pastel shades of make-up aren't compatible. The soft, subtle pinks of early spring that flattered the fair adds no beauty to the bronze-tinted face.

As summer advances the tones of the skin change to a darker hue. Rouge, powder, lipstick, fingernail polishes and make-up bases should be changed to harmonize with the skin tones. Vibrant reds and tropical rust shades with a hint of brown are the most becoming cosmetics for the sun-tanned skin.

Two new summer shades of rouge and lipstick have been created especially for the sun-tanned. "Red Africa," a brilliant, flame-like red, enhances the moderately tanned, and "Tahiti," a bronze red that borders on the rust gives life to the very dark sun-tan skins.

Among the new fingernail polishes are "Red Sail"—a gay, sparkling red with a mere hint of ocean blue; "Red Sand," a deep brown red, like a ripe berry; also "Pirate Red," a rich, tropical, sophisticated red.

There are graduating shades of face powder for the light, medium and deeply sun-tanned complexions. These vary from "Soft Peach," for the slightly sun-tanned skins to the deeper, darker "Sunglow" for the very dark sun-tanned skins.

Fringe Is 'In Again' For Milady's Dress

Hollywood, Calif., June 23.—Fringe is one of the in-again-out-agains of fashion. At the moment it's in with Genevieve Tobin, who wears a stunning coat of it in "No Time For Comedy."

It's a boxy coat at hip length and has the fringe set on in 5-inch tiers from a rounded yoke of white flannel serge. A small cardinal's cap of serge fits snugly over the crown of Genevieve's dark hair. She'll wear this stunning topper with a slim black crepe dinner gown.

Effect of Paper

Scenic wall paper usually is best in a hall—it might become tiresome used in a living room and it is not restful in a bedroom. Keep away from bold figures and vivid colors in a bedroom.

Long Walls Raise Problem In Decoration

Opportunity Offered For Varied Furniture Arrangement, However

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

FIREPLACES are nice, certainly, but the success of the room isn't going to stand or fall on this architectural detail. If your living room doesn't have a fireplace, a bay window or any other structural feature to break its boxy effect, then you probably have some long walls to play with. And they have their advantages in that they permit many different furniture arrangements so you can shift things around every which way till you get them just right. But this long wall does present decorating problems to solve if you want to make the room personable.

The first thing, of course, is a center of interest. You have to do something about that right away, if you expect the room to make its point decoratively speaking. And though the best decorators approve fake fireplaces, we still hold out against the idea whenever it's possible to focus a room interestingly without one. And today we're going to present some smart alternatives.

Antiques in Modern Setting

As suave a living room as we've seen this year was modern and yet mellow, too, because the owner used a contemporary background and contemporary furniture as a setting for a connoisseur's collection of relics and antiquities.

These, in fact, were made the focal point of the room, placed skillfully along a low long bookcase that extended most of the length of the room's most important wall. This wall was papered in silver, in contrast to the neutral painted tone of the adjoining walls, the sheen of the silver further concentrating attention here.

The same treatment was repeated on the wall opposite. The other two walls were left very simple and so receded; even the windows had only Venetian blinds. The floor was coverd with matting, over which there was a blue broadloom rug cut out in a sort of scroll outline. All the furniture was pale, a natural wood with a waxed finish.

Another living room that we liked because of the handling of the wall spaces was also modern in furnishings, though dashing patterns and incisive colors were worked into its design. The most important long wall in the room was papered in a dramatic patterned paper, with gold and turquoise and brown as its predominant colors, while adjoining walls were in plain wood brown.

End Wall Mirrored

A sofa in peacock blue velvet extended the full length of this wall—specially built of course. The end wall in this same room was entirely mirrored, but instead of a single sweep of mirror, it was installed in three sections, the center panel flat against the wall, while the two end panels cut the corners as diagonally as would corner cupboards—the effect of a bay window or an alcove was thus achieved where plants and easy chairs were grouped conversationally together.

The moral of our story today is that it is important to create a focal point in the room without an architectural center, or the furnishings are apt to sprawl all around and get nowhere. A collection of whatever you do collect is often the answer to what shall make this focal design, for many hobby collections are very decorative.

A fine view may be the answer for you if you're a lucky one. Or else a mural of distinction. Or you can always fall back on a beautiful length of fabric or a spectacular wall paper, tiers of book shelves, a big mirror or a tall, many-paneled screen, or a leather quilted wall if you really want to be different.

Cupboard Is Pride Of Dutch Home

The presiding treasure in practically every prosperous home in Holland before the war was an enormous cupboard, carved and stately, often with four doors or else with two glass-paned doors and drawers below. Whichever type the cupboard was, however, on one point there was rarely any variation: Arranged across the top in a precise and formal row were five large vases of Delft ware. Never four, never three, always five: two pairs and an odd, three of them with covers, two without, and practically always of the old blue and white ware.

The cupboard, as well as the Delft and the entire mood of these comfortable Dutch homes until recently, recall in spirit if not in fact those expansive days when Holland was a foremost world power.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Despite Their Love, Girl Never Would Marry Man Unless Her Parents Approved, and Religious Differences Make This Unlikely; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have studied this problem so many tmes, from so many angles, that I can no longer analyze it coherently. It has me going in circles. So, while I am not in the habit of pushing my problems on to others' shoulders, I must ask you to help me reach a decision.

I am a man of 23 and I know pretty well what I want from life. For the past two years I have been going with a girl who, to me, is tops. She is 22. We are in love with each other; we have discussed marriage often during recent months and our ideas on the subject are much the same. So far, so good. Now comes the problem.

Our religions differ. In fact, they clash. Between ourselves, we could adjust this, but it would be impossible to reconcile our parents to the difference. I have met her parents and am well aware that they dslike me heartily, perhaps because of my religion, since I know of no other reason. My mother would never approve of my marrying a girl of a different religion—so that makes us even, on the parental score.

This girl is a very dutiful daughter (for which I commend her), and as such refuses to marry without the consent of her parents, which I know they will never give as long as the prospective bridegroom is myself. (And while I may seem to treat this subject lightly, the girl means very much to me). If I do not find a happy solution, I shall be very miserable, and so will she.

Incidentally, while I have said my mother never would approve of my marrying a girl of another religion, still, she will not object to my marrying this girl when I tell her just how I feel about her. If you can give any advice or outline any procedure which would change the opinion of her parents, my gratitude will be endless. Sincerity, W. C. B.

One Should Be Adult While Being Dutiful,

DEAR W. C. B.: While it is admirable to be a dutiful son or daughter, after the decades of manhood and womanhood have been reached, it is equally admirable and quite as important to have the strength of mind and character to make one's own decisions and assume full responsibility for one's own actions of a life-shaping kind. And this is a responsibility which your sweetheart seems inclined to evade.

Apparently all her decisions must be framed with first reference to mama's and papa's approval, regardless of how much bias or prejudice colors their authoritarian opinion. And this suggests that the man she marries with the parental blessing will be marrying a triumvirate (or perhaps a whole clan) on a captive's terms, and not "the one woman," on a reciprocal term who will cling to him through thick and thin, "forsaking all others." Which rather clips his wings at the start, doesn't it?

As I see your situation, changing the opinion of the girl's parents (if that were possible) isn't so important as drafting, with the girl's voluntary valiant cooperation, a civilized marriage plan that would enable you, if married, to rear your children in an orthodox tradition, without making them the pawns of religious conflict. This must be a plan that your reason, your respective faiths and your individual codes of ethics would permit (yes, and strengthen) you to support, despite all zealot opposition or dubiety.

Can you, between you, make such a plan?—and wholeheartedly abide by it, sustained by the knowledge that your mutual love, combined resourcefulness and reciprocal spiritual benevolence are equal to every challenge that the compromise arrangement may present? If the answers are "yes," you are entitled to exercise the privilege of charting your own marriage course, even in the face of parental opposition. But I gather that the girl is too weak in spirit, and too immature in character, to dare so adventurous, so adult a program.

I feel that it would be futile for you to importune or harangue the girl's parents on love's argument alone. Therefore, the best way to bring the religious issue to open, objective discussion is for you, as a pair, to take your problem to your respective ministers, in turn. Or, better yet, to the highest spokesmen of your respective faiths that can be found in this community; since the higher one goes in the scale of theological exposition, the more generous and cooperative, usually, is the viewpoint expounded.

At a recent round-table conference of mothers, the question was put to a Protestant minister: "What attitude should we parents take toward mixed marriages?" His reply, in essence, was that the proposition of mixed marriages should be met in a spirit of Christian love or fellow-feeling, and that the circumstances of the individual case need to be studied before applicable recommendations can be made.

This is the constructive attitude, surely; and the one with which you, your sweetheart and her parents should become acquainted, if you would see that social and spiritual justice are served by your eventual decision.

Sunday School Conference Speaker Sees Christianity Triumphant Over Dictators

District Group Hears Baltimore Minister At Western Maryland

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Staff Writer

A prediction that Christianity will triumph over modern dictators, just as it has conquered such forces in the past, was voiced yesterday at Western Maryland College, Westminster, by the Rev. T. Guthrie Speers, of Baltimore.

Working through the network of individual lives, Christianity will accomplish the downfall of such institutions as dictatorships, he told delegates attending the closing sessions of the Teachers and Officers and Young People's Conferences, sponsored by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, with the cooperation of the Religious Work Department of the Y. M. C. A.

Speaking in Baker Chapel, the pastor of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church urged the assembly not to be discouraged or disheartened because of the war crises, and warned them that if Christianity was to triumph over such conditions, personal faith, courage, hope and loyalty were imperative.

Youth Conference Meets

Earlier in the day, in the same chapel, the Youth Conference met for its annual business session, reelecting Leslie L. Bowers, jr., of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, as president. Announcement was made that young Bowers will represent the Sunday School Association at the International Council of Religious Education opening tomorrow at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Miss Frances Rock was elected secretary, and the following were chosen as denominational vice presidents:

William D. Anderson, jr., Baptist; Catherine Pyne, Disciples of Christ; Helen Spencer Methodist; James Huddleston Presbyterian; Dorothy Hetrick, Reformed and Hilda Luttrell and William Trotter, Baltimore area.

William S. Jones was relected to head the Officers and Teachers Conference; Page McK. Etchison, religous work secretary of the Y. M. C. A., executive secretary; Mrs. John Petrie, vice president, and Mrs. Etchison, pianist.

Communion Service

The local Sunday school workers yesterday morning continued their discussions on the value of using Christian principles in domestic, social, economic, national, international and other crises.

Shortly before dinner, the delegates held a communion service in Baker Chapel, under direction of the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of the Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church.

On Saturday night, as the King Solomon's Court program opened in McDaniel Hall, Norman A. Lufburrow, of Baltimore, attired in purple robes and crown, entered with all the pomp of an Oriental potentate. His retinue included the Rev. Mr. Savage, high priest; George B. Fraser, Chester Jones and Lynn Elmore, wearing red fezzes, advisers, and young Bowers, court crier.

The Gad Biblical tribe was adjudged as having presented the best story of Holy Writ. The Dan and Asher tribes also participated.

of skilled labor thus will be provided, the commission declared.

Floyd W. Reeves, executive assistant to Sidney Hillman, labor member of the commission, has been named to coordinate the training facilities of governmental agencies, private industry, organized labor and local civil organizations.

Serving with him in an advisory capacity will be Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board; Clara Beyer, chairman of the apprenticeship committee of the Department of Labor; Wayne Coy, assistant administrator of the Federal Security Agency; Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics of the Department of Labor, who has been assigned to Mr. Hillman's staff as an executive assistant; J. J. McEntee, director of the CCC; Maj. Frank J. McSherry of the General Staff, War Department; Fred R. Rauch, assistant commissioner in charge of the Division of Employment, WPA; John W. Studebaker, commissioner, Office of Education, and Aubrey Williams, administrator of the NYA.

"Inservice" Training Urged

Hillman recommended that funds be utilized—$20,200,000 is made available in the deficiency bill—for voluntary "inservice" training of workers in industry, workers on WPA and NYA projects, and for the unemployed generally, as they may be needed.

"Immediate development of highly trained skilled workers for industry," his announcement said, "can best be accomplished in industry itself through an inservice training program. Under this system, workers already employed will be moved upward through job training and related vocational courses.

"The system will be developed with the cooperation of trade and technical schools, drawing instructors in part from their staffs. It will greatly facilitate employment in the industries involved in the national defense. Few plants now maintain organized training programs and train relatively small numbers of employes."

The program also contemplates utilization of plants, equipment and staffs or trade and technical schools, both public and private, for eight or ten weeks this summer, to supply future labor needs. The Office of Education has been working on this program "with the full cooperation of educators throughout the country."

Elementary training in selected basic skills will be provided in this manner for workers in private industry on WPA and NYA rolls and the unemployed generally.

Additional courses will be available through the NYA and the CCC "to develop good working habits and elementary basic skills in simple operations involving primarily the use of hand tools."

Britain Disowns Petain's Regime

proclaimed that naval base would be defended by all available means.]

De Gaulle spoke shortly after a French broadcast had announced his dismissal from the army for having urged Frenchmen last night to rally to Britain's side in the fight against Germany. Earlier, he had been dropped from the cabinet.

De Gaulle said the committee, formed in agreement with the British government, was determined to maintain French independence and honor French agreements, and would have jurisdiction over all French citizens in Great Britain.

"An independent government no longer exists on French territorial soil," he said.

The British announcement said the government found the terms of the German-French armistice were "in contravention of agreements solemnly made between the Allied governments "and reduced the Bordeaux government "to a state of complete subjection to the enemy and deprived it of all liberty and all right to represent free French citizens."

"His Majesty's government therefore now declare that they can no longer regard the Bordeaux government as the government of an independent country," the announcement said.

To Deal With Committee

"His Majesty's government have taken note of the proposal to form a provisional French national committee and will deal with them in all matters concerning the prosecution of the war so long as that committee continues to represent all French elements resolved to fight the common enemy."

De Gaulle said names of the committee members would be announced soon.

"The armistice accepted by the government in Bordeaux delivers to our enemy our arms, our airplanes, our gold, our future," De Gaulle said. "This capitulation has enslaved France completely and placed the government of Bordeaux under the immediate and direct dependency of the Germans and Italians."

France No Longer Free

"Moreover our political institutions are no longer in position to function freely, and the people of France have at the moment no opportunity of expressing their true will.

"Consequently, and owing to force majeure, a French national committee will be formed in agreement with the British government, representing the interests of the country and people, resolved to maintain the independence of France, her honor and the alliances to which she is committed, also to contribute to the war efforts of the Allies until final victory."

This committee, De Gaulle said, would be accountable to the established legal French government "as soon as one exists" or to the representatives of the people of France when "circumstances allow them to assemble in conditions compatible with liberty, dignity and security.

"The French national committee will take under its jurisdiction all French citizens at present in British territory and will assume the direction of all military and administrative bodies who are now or may be in the future in this country."

Earlier the British government announced it had received pledges of support from the French colonial empire, determined to carry on the war against Germany.

The government's formal announcement that the signing of the armistice "brings to an end the organized resistance of the French forces at home," declared that in the French colonial empire "a more robust spirit prevails."

Pledges of support from Syria, French Indo-China, Morocco, Senegal, the Cameroons and Djibuti were announced.

Financial Arrangements

"His Majesty's government," the statement said, "are prepared to make financial arrangements to enable the French colonial empire to play its part." It added:

"As stated by the prime minister, the British aim is the complete restoration of the metropolitan and overseas territory of France."

Among the messages of French colonial support, the government announced, was one from Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, the French commander in chief in Syria, who proclaimed determination of his forces to fight on.

"In Indo-China," the government statement said, "the governor general has declared that he will not lower his flag. In Tunis the resident general is firm in his intention to continue the struggle.

Demonstration in Saigon

"In Morocco, Senegal, the Cameroons and Djibouti, assurances of loyal support have been received from the military or civil authorities."

French residents of Saigon, French Indo-China, demonstrated publicly this morning, urging that France accept the British offer of political union and continue the war together, Reuters, British news agency, said.

At Shanghai the French colony dispatched a message to to French government at Bordeaux, advocating continued resistance to Germany and solidarity with the Allied cause.

"Betrayed," Say British

The British press echoed Prime Minister Churchill's "grief and amazement" at the Petain government's acceptance of Hitler's terms and said France had been betrayed and "we with her."

"France will not desert," said the Herald, Labor paper. "Always in her heart she will carry the message of the "Marseillaise"—March on! march on! At the very moment when Marshal Petain's chief delegate put his pen to the armistice terms, the second French Revolution was born."

The News Chronicle's commentator, Vernon Bartlett: "The French surrender involves political changes all over the world and no one can yet tell their magnitude."

The paper said editorially that a government "composed of pro-Fascist elements unconditionally surrenders the French people and army to Fascist domination, shockingly increased the peril of its democratic allies and hands over the soil of free France to become the base of Fascist attack on the British people."

Iraq Officials To Sound Turks On Assistance

Attempted Occupation Of French-Mandated Syria by Italy Feared

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Turkey, June 23.—Turkey, greatly concerned over the possibility of an attempted Italian occupation of French-mandated Syria, prepared tonight to receive Foreign Minister Nuri Said and other officials of Irak, whose Mosul oil fields are at the mercy of any power established in Syria.

The Irak officials, due in Ankara tomorrow, are expected to sound out the Turks on how much help they can count on in case of trouble.

The Turks would regard an Italian occupation of Syria almost as great a peril as a direct attack on their own soil.

[The British ministry of information asserted the French commander in Syria, Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, had declared his army would not be affected by the French surrender.]

It is reported without confirmation that the Turkish government already has appealed to Germany not to permit a change in Syria's status.

Nazi Punishment Feared

It appears the Turks gladly would orient their policy with that of Germany if they were sure the Germans were not going to punish them for having lined up with the British-French alliance before the war.

Economic reasons tend to compel this. More than half of Turkey's trade formerly was with the Reich. Britain and France took a large part of the remainder, but that trade now is largely cut off by Italy's entry into the war, and more than $40,000,000 worth of Turkish produce is piled up on docks and in warehouses. Turkey is only waiting word from Germany to give the Reich goods on almost any terms.

The Turks signed a new trade agreement with the Reich only the other day.

Turkey also remains uneasy over Bulgarian aspirations. Military preparations are continuing with many more men being called up and automobiles, peasant carts and even bicycles being requisitioned.

"They are looking their present and their future squarely in the face.

"For the present they are certain to show greater grandeur in avowing their defeat than in opposing vain and illusory projects. For the future they know their destiny is in their courage and their perseverance."

A sentinel line of posts topped with white flags establishes a safety zone 10 miles north and east of refugee-jammed Bordeaux, beyond which, Gen. Maxime Weygand announced, Adolf Hitler has promised his armies will not pass.

Weygand said he had telegraphed the German high command a description of the white flag line and its location after Hitler's promise was received by Petain.

Petain disclosed that he had Hitler's personal assurance that limits around the provisional capital of France would be respected pending settlement of a French-Italian armistice.

With German troops thrusting steadily closer to Bordeaux down the Atlantic coast, exhausted French armies threw their last effort into a grim defense until the order comes to cease firing.

From the high passes of the Alps to the Mediterranean repeated Italian attacks were replused, but from the north the advance of German spearheads pushing down the Atlantic coast were nearing Rochefort, only 80 miles north of Bordeaux.

The French still held doggedly to most of their positions along the south bank of the River Cher, but were being pushed slowly south from the Loire.

Activity was general along a wide southeastern front, but the French said repeated Italian attacks broke against a solid French defense line.

Rebuilding Task Is Huge

Word of the signing of Armistice with Germany brought a reaction of relief to thousands in Bordeaux, but their burden stilll weighed heavily.

Civilian and government officials alike faced the tremendous task of rebuilding France, whatever the eventual terms of peace.

The problem of refugees is great in all of France not yet occupied by German troops, and to this will be added the work of rehabilitation, and the trek back to shell-plowed fields, empty barns and ruined homes.

The last of Britain's diplomatic representation was withdrawn from the French provisional capital Saturday, it was disclosed.

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, left then on a British destroyer with the last members of his staff and a few British residents who had remained in Bordeaux.

Just before a cabinet meeting started at noon, Pierre Laval, veteran of a half dozen cabinet posts since 1925, was appointed vice premier. Once premier himself, Laval had been a critic of the government until the selection of 84-year-old Marshal Henri Philippe Petain to make France's peace.

Spain Relaxes Visa Rules To Admit U. S. War Refugees

500 to 1,000 Travel-Weary Americans Fleeing France Cross Spanish Frontier; Consulate to Aid in Return Home

By the Associated Press

Madrid, June 23.—The United States Embassy disclosed tonight that the Spanish government has authorized entry without visas of Americans fleeing the war zone and bound for the United States.

The number was estimated at 500 to 1,000.

Under the Spanish waiving of formalities, special trains will take the Americans to Balboa on the Bay of Biscay, where they will wait until it is decided whether the United States will send a ship there or to Lisbon, Portugal.

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., American Ambassador to the Polish government in exile, but acting at Bordeaux, France, for Ambassador William Bullitt, is perfecting arrangements on the French side for the Americans' departure.

Both the Spanish and Portuguese governments were carefully sorting the refugees of various nationalities who will be permitted to take up residence. Others are being given transit visas when they show they can continue to some other country.

Poverty increased for many refugees, with French currency scorned and even English pounds accepted reluctantly by Spaniards.

Thousands of abandoned cars were said to line the highways of southern France—empty of fuel.

There was little information in Spain concerning one unhappy class of refugees—the thousands of Spanish Republicans who fled to France after the Nationalist victory in the Spanish war.

One report said the French had discontinued the camp system for these Spaniards, leaving them to fend for themselves.

San Sebastian, Spain, June 23 (AP).—Ragged lines of refugees and a sprinkling of others more prosperous, among them some Americans, wound over the French-Spanish frontier today, in the wake of the caravans of the wealthy who had been arriving for several days.

Many refugees bought everything they could in France rather than keep their money, for fear the franc would become valueless.

Lisbon, June 25 (AP).—American destroyers which left Lisbon for an unannounced port yesterday returned tonight and anchored in the Tagus River. Aboard were a number of American refugees from Morocco.

Madrid, June 23 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived in Madrid at 3:30 p. m., and dined with Sir Samuel Hoare, British Abassador to Spain.

When he came to, Williams said, he found Mrs. Carroll dead, sprawled on the running board. Chief Sauers quoted Williams as stating that he and Mrs. Carroll had agreed to die together but that when he regained consciousness he changed his mind.

Williams said he pulled Mrs. Carroll's body back into the car before starting for Fort Meade.

When Glen Burnie police reached the scene at 3:45 a. m., the body of Mrs. Carroll was on the front seat on the right side of the car and near an open window, Chief Sauers said. In her purse was found a note, written in ink on the inside of the picnic program.

Chief Sauers declined to reveal contents of the note, but State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson said it indicated the woman contemplated death and that it was written as though she had meant it to be read by Williams.

No Signs of Violence

Mrs. Carroll's body was taken to the Singleton funeral home in Glen Burnie, where an autopsy was conducted yesterday morning. No marks of violence were found on the body, Chief Sauers said, and monoxide gas was definitely established as the death cause.

Mrs. Carroll leaves her husband, Fred Carroll, of the Carroll Fish Co., at Municipal Market, and children, Charles A., 19; Mrs. Margaret Roberts, 18, and Frederick, 16, all of the Foxhall road address.

Iron Guard Backs Carol's New Party

Bucharest, June 23 (AP).—Iron Guard Leader Horia Sima issued a command to "my comrades" tonight to join King Carol's new political party.

The first name on the long list of Iron Guardists applying for party membership was Ion Codreanu, father of Corneliu Codreanu, leader of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, who was slain last autumn while attempting to escape prison.

Leisure Time Group Urges YouthCenters

Building Expansion, More Workers Advocated by New Committee

"Community clubs or youth centers" in every area of the District rather than "so-called girls clubs or boys clubs" were advocated by the new Committee on Leisure Time Activities for Girls in its first report released during the weekend.

This was the committee's answer to one of the major questions which prompted its creation—should a system of girls' clubs be set up to reach girls who are now without regular recreation?

The committee, in its report, reached "a general consensus . . . that it is not desirable to establish recreation centers, clubs, etc., which are assigned exclusively for the use of one group or another. The Boys' Clubs already established in the city are conducting co-recreational programs and are offering facilities for the use of girls at specified times," it was pointed out, in emphasis on more intensive use of present facilities.

Headed by Miss Sybil Baker, associate director of recreation in the District, the committee urged in the report to Commissioner John Russell Young, the following objectives "which the city should seek immediately:"

Solution of the acute need for additional trained personnel. (Increases in the public and Community Chest budgets to employ more workers at recreation centers will be sought, it was said.)

Support of the building expansion proposed for Northwest, Southeast and Southwest Houses, to widen their recreation programs.

Planned Program

Only about 30 per cent of Washington girls are now being reached by some planned recreation program, the committee estimated.

"A worthwhile demonstration in joint boy-and-girl activities" would be possible at the southeast branch of the Boys Club of Washington, with the addition of "one full-time girls' worker . . . and a small amount for supplies," it was pointed out. A program for 200 to 300 girls could thus be carried there.

The committee's preliminary report was based on information from 24 public and private agencies of the 45 from which it was sought. The committee will continue the study.

The 24 agencies reporting "are carrying programs for approximately 19,400 girls, of whom 13,800 are white, and 5,600 colored.

"With the addition of 26 full-time and seven part-time workers, they believe they could serve 3,041 more girls with their present facilities," it was stated.

More Workers Needed

"In Georgetown in the Children's House and in the big Salvation Army building, with a few more workers, they could practically cover the field for girls of the neighborhood.

"Seven private agencies and the Public Recreation Department are endeavoring to carry on their program for Negro girls under the handicaps of insufficient space, inadequate facilities and limited personnel," it was stated.

The 5,600 girls who are reached are only "about 25 per cent of the colored girls between the ages of 5 and 20 in the District."

One of the paramount needs which the committee cited was "one full-time professionally trained person with perhaps a small voluntary advisory committee to keep always in the forefront the need for development of girls' activities," and to coordinate the public and private undertakings in this field.

Feminine Query, 'What to Wear?' Is Police Problem

The weatherman and Washington police should get together.

A couple of weeks ago, local police doffed winter uniforms for shirtsleeves and pith helmets in anticipation of Washington's usual blistering summer. Yesterday Inspector Edward J. Kelly ordered them back into coats and caps for night duty.

"It's simply a commonsense matter of health," said Kelly "It's been mighty cool and uncomfortable for our men in shirtsleeves these last few nights. We've got to protect our men, you know."

The weatherman, meanwhile, held out little hope for early return to summer sartorial status. Today, he said, will bring thundershowers and a maximum tempera- of 85 degrees, while tomorrow will be cloudy and cooler.

Catholic U. Plans Summer Branch

GroundBroken For St. David's New Church

Ceremonies Held At Macomb Street And Klingle Rd. N.W.

Thomas E. Henderson, sepuagenarian member of St. David's Episcopal Chapel, yesterday turned the first spadeful of earth for the new church at Macomb street and Klingle road northwest.

Former senior warden of the chapel, a mission of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Henderson broke the ground shortly after Dr. Charles T. Warner, in a brief address, traced the colorful 40-year history of the chapel, and led a dedicatory service.

The Rev. Spence A. Dunbar, vicar of the chapel, hallowed the ground, and the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, gave the benediction.

The ceremonies followed services in the Field House, on Sherrier place northwest, where Dr. Warner, rector of St. Alban's, spoke briefly. Approximate cost of the first unit, comprising a nave and vicarage, will be about $25,000.

Joe Judge Serves as Umpire as Prince Georges Team Defeats Montgomery; Boxing, Band Music Enliven Program at Md. Estate

More than 1,000 members of the Seventh District, Knights of Columbus, yesterday frolicked on the estate of J. H. Orme, Veirs Mill road, between Wheaton and Rockville, at the second annual track and field day. It was supposed to be a stag party, but some of the women folk showed up just the same and had a good time, too.

As best as could be determined from the scorers, the field events winners were as follows: 50-yard dash—Cronin; 75-yard dash—Cronin; 50-yard dash for fat men—Simms; 50-yard three-legged race—Wingo and Zalezak; novelty race—Canfield; 50-yard junior race—Colliton; 50-yard midgets race—P. The Prince Georges team defeated the Montgomery opposition in softball, at which Joe Judge was umpire, and in volleyball. The program also included boxing matches by the Merrick Boys Club, badminton matches and music by the Chevy Chase Farms Dairy Band.

Seventh District, Knights of Columbus includes the councils of Montgomery, Rock Creek, Forest Glen and Prince Georges, Representative William D. Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, was among the guests. George V. Menke, of Forest Glen, headed the general committee.

Former Football Star Opens Week's Revival Series Here

Glenn Wagner, University of Illinois Hero, Tells How He Turned From Life Of 'Drinking and Gambling' to Preach Gospel

A football star who turned from a "career of drinking and gambling" to a life dedicated to saving souls is 300-pound, dynamic Glenn W. Wagner, who opened a week's revival services here last night.

Glenn Wagner

For his own salvation, the 6-foot 3-inch blond giant, center of the championship 1928 University of Illinois team, gives credit to another former football star.

It happened between semesters, when Wagner, at his home in Peoria, Ill., was gambling all day Sundays and "never darkening the door of a church," he recalled after last night's services, held in a tent at P street and Rock Creek bridge northwest.

Converted by Friend

Curious to hear what would be said by Luke Rader, former Denver University footballer, at evangelistic services, he was conducting there, Wagner attended one of the meetings.

"Through his message," Wagner said, "I was beckoned by the Lord. I stepped out into an aisle before a crowd of people, many of them my own, and claimed Christ, describing myself publicly as a sinner coming to his Savior."

He went back to the University and "witnessed for Christ there—one of my friends was won to the Lord in two weeks," he said.

Since then Wagner has been conducting evangelistic services in various parts of the country, almost continually, except for time taken to attend the Dallas (Tex.) Theological Seminary and for another year, in 1931, at the University of Illinois.

Holds Audience's Attention

Ruddy faced, with soft blue eyes and tremendous, ham-like hands, Wagner conducted last night's services in a controlled, unhysterical voice.

But he kept his audience's close attention, with sweeping gestures of his stocky arms and huge fists and with a sermon on the thesis that "the Lord is merciful, the Lord is good", despite sentiment to the contrary since Hitler's blitzkrieg began.

"God has a wonderful plan in his plan for the Universe," he explained. "It is a plan of salvation. God loves us tonight."

150,000 Traps Set for Evasive Japanese Beetle

Maryland's annual Japanese beetle control program is rounding into full swing with the distribution of 150,000 traps throughout the State.

Dr. George S. Langford, of the State entomologist's office at the University of Maryland, said 8,300 traps had been allotted to Prince Georges County and about 5,000 to Montgomery County.

The Oxon Hill and Chevy Chase areas are the most heavily infested sections in nearby Maryland, Dr. Langford said.

Most of the traps this year have been painted yellow, instead of green and white. Experiments by the Department of Agriculture showed the beetles favored the brighter color.

Hundreds of high school and college boys have obtained summer jobs operating the traps. Any live beetles that may be caught will be exterminated in jars of kerosene.

Last year, Dr. Langford said, 104 tons of beetles were trapped throughout the State.

Complaint About Dogs' Routine

While jangled nerves and torn trousers are of prime importance to the postmen of Hyattsville, they are merely routine matters to the United States Postoffice Department in Washington.

"This is the time of year when dogs give all carriers, and their trousers, a lot of trouble," an official of that department explained yesterday. "From now until Labor Day the files are full of complaints," he said.

In answer to the Hyattsville letter carriers' complaint that out of 90 to 122 dogs on each route five are vicious this official said that the average is not high, it is the same all over the country.

However, "carriers are not required to deliver mail at residences where vicious dogs are permitted to run at large," he pointed out.

Man Killed, Nine Injured In Accidents

Fairfax Station Resident Crushed As Auto Overturns On Highway

One man was killed and nine other persons were injured, one critically, in accidents yesterday on streets and highways burdened with Sunday traffic.

Ralph Demory, 23, of Fairfax Station, Va., was killed almost instantly yesterday morning when the car in which he was riding overturned on Route 9, about 10 miles east of Fairfax Courthouse.

Thrown from the automobile, Demory, a carpenter, was crushed beneath it as it turned over several times. Otis Wolfrey, of Route 1, Lorton, Va., also in the car, received a broken leg. In Alexandria Hospital, he could give no cause for the accident except that the car got out of control.

William Rogers, 24, of Route 1, Alexandria, was arrested by State Trooper James W. Clarke on hit-and-run and drunk driving charges after a collision on Route 1, 6 miles south of Alexandria, in which Mrs. Cecelia Brown, 41, of Richmond, Va., was injured.

Clarke said Rogers pulled out of a filling station into the path of a car driven by Isadore Brown, the injured woman's husband, then jumped from his automobile and ran into the woods after the crash. Clarke caught him in a nearby woods after he had been seen recrossing the highway.

Mrs. Brown received lacerations but was not injured seriously, it was reported at Alexandria Hospital.

Struck by an automobile as he was crossing the street in the middle of the 900 block New York Avenue northwest, James Grant, 40, of 938 New York Avenue northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital early yesterday morning where he was treated for lacerations of the scalp.

Police said the car which struck Grant was driven by Claude E. Hamilton, 41, of 3122 Tennyson street northwest. He was not held.

Injured in a two-car collision at Second street and Constitution Avenue northwest was Mrs. Lila Mae Torregrossa, 20, of 1732 C street northeast, who was riding in a car operated by her husband. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for head injuries.

Driver of the other car, according to police, was Mildred White, 42, of 819 Hamilton Boulevard, Hagerstown, Md.

Sylvia Murphy, 8, colored, of 208 Fifth street southeast was struck as she ran across the street at Seventh and I northeast by a car police said was driven by Lincoln L. Sharp, 20, of 607 Third street northwest. She was taken to Providence Hospital and treated for abrasions.

Millard Taylor, 70, of near Merrifield, Va., was in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital after being struck by an automobile early today on Lee highway at Merrifield. Fairfax County, and District police were seeking an automobile bearing Maryland tags which, witnesses said, failed to stop after striking Taylor.

Three persons were injured in a collision between two automobiles last night on Central avenue northeast, near Crain highway. At Casualty Hospital, where their injuries were said not to be serious, they were Robert Taylor, 19, and his sister, Audene Taylor, 17, both of 1617 D street southeast, and Henry Parker, 48, of Harwood, Md.

Jehovah Sect Moves Session To Washington

Leaves Rockville, Md., After Mob Violence; FBI Scans Evidence

Usual Sunday night Bible study meeting of the Jehovah's Witnesses at Rockville, Md., was transferred to Washington last night. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents have not completed their investigation of the attack by a mob on the headquarters of the Witnesses last Wednesday night, Dr. A. R. Olson, company servant or leader for Montgomery County, Md., explained.

The Witnesses are leaving the headquarters in Rockville in the same condition that was apparent after the mob tore up the interior when the Witnesses refused to go downstairs and salute an American flag until the investigations of the incident are completed, Dr. Olson said.

F. B. I. agents have questioned Chief of Police Charles M. Orme, who, with three subordinates, was suspended by the Montgomery County commissioners pending complete investigation of the failure of county police to protect the meeting, and a number of other witnesses.

Sergt. Guy L. Jones and Policemen Leslie Thompson and Charles Peters are awaiting action of the county police trial board for alleged failure to protect the cult members from the mob.

Chief Orme, a political appointee, can be dismissed by the county commissioners without trial, but all other members of the force are under protection of civil service.

The county commissioners met all day Saturday in special session to hear witnesses in the incident and then announced suspension of Chief Orme and his aides. Sergt. Roy Bodmer, veteran member of the force, was named acting chief of police during Orme's suspension.

The seven graduates of the Washington College of Music last night gave up the privilege of appearing in cap and gown, and donated the $25 rental fee to the Red Cross war relief fund.

In an Oriental gown of pink satin, Mrs. Hwei-Ru Yang Wu, of China, stepped up to receive her degree of bachelor of music. In the past two years while her own home in Changsha was destroyed in her absence, during the Japanese invasion, Mrs. Wu has studied piano here.

All the graduates have played in previous recitals, but 25-year-old Mrs. Wu was the only one to play on the commencement program last night, one of the selections having an Oriental flavor, "Pagodes" by Debussy. Mrs. Wu, who lives at 236 Massachusetts avenue northeast, came to this country two years ago when her husband was asked to do some special work in the Oriental division of the Library of Congress. She expects to teach music in her native land on her return.

Dr. Julia Schelling, musician, lecturer and sister of the late Ernest Schelling, delivered the graduation address, giving this definition as her theme: "Genius is the spontaneous expression of years of hard study and work." The graduates' donation to the Red Cross will be given through the Gray Ladies, in which Dr. Schelling is active.

Fanny Amstutz Roberts, president, made the presentations to the following, in addition to Mrs. Wu: Bachelor of music, in music education, Sylvia Rosner; teacher's diploma in violin, Lela Mead Burt; college certificates in piano, Thelma Cox, Martha Wilson Hoffman, Violet McQueen; in flute, Jeanne Davidson.

Jr. Hadassah Installs New Official Staff

Two Sets of Sisters, Five in All, Hold Program Spotlight

Junior Hadassah installation of officers last night turned out to be several "sister acts."

Miss Hilda Siegel and Miss Blanche Siegel took office as president and first vice president, respectively. Three sisters, Misses Hilda, Ida and Lillian Penn, became corresponding secretaries, succeeding two sisters, Misses Ruth and Naomi Morgenstein.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, president of Senior Hadassah, was installing officer at the program, which was a dinner dance at Maryland Club Gardens. She and another speaker, Mrs. Raphael Turover, president of the Seaboard Region of Senior Hadassah, stressed the fact that in chaotic times youth must coordinate its activities and identify itself more closely with the Zionist program.

Miss Siegel, the new president, who succeeds Mrs. Carolyn Berenter Bogen, in her brief talk said that "Palestine is the haven for thousands of Nazi and Fascist victims who are permitted there to rehabilitate themselves . . . There we hope to build a democracy permeated with the ideals of the prophetic traditions."

Other new officers installed were Dorothy Berman, second vice president; Irene Berenter, third vice president; Gertrude Gerber, recording secretary; Jeanette Kimche, financial secretary; Anne Rich, treasurer.

About 120 persons attended the program. Among the honor guests was Irving Levitas, cultural director of A. Z. A., who has been leading the educational work of Junior Hadassah.

Tear-Gas Bomb Lets Go, Clears Police Station

Prisoners Removed To County Jail; Firemen Called

Montgomery County police at the Bethesda, Md., substation improved their understanding of the word "blitzkrieg" yesterday.

Desk Clerk D. D. Pagett and Private John Leahy were standing on the front steps of the station at 9:45 a. m., when from within came the sound of a muffled explosion. As they ran back into the building, Leahy recognized the odor of tear gas. He traced it to a filing cabinet.

The Bethesda Fire Department was summoned and while firemen, wearing masks, were clearing the building of gas, Leahy and Pagett transferred two prisoners to the jail at Rockville.

Pagett and Leahy were treated by Dr. Benjamin Perry.

The gas bomb, it was believed, had ben jarred and the pin that controls its operation, knocked loose. The filing cabinet, it was explained, is used for general storage purposes, including the safekeeping of gas bombs.

World Chaos Result of Sin, Catholics Told

Mrs. Frank O'Hara Asks Guild Members To Accept Divine Law

Mrs. Frank O'Hara, vice president of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild, yesterday blamed repudiation of the laws of brotherly and divine love for the world chaos.

"In the utter pandemonium of hatred and slaughter that is going on," she said at the Guild services yesterday afternoon in Franklin Park, "the unmistakable truth that stands out is that something is fearfully wrong."

"It is that the laws implanted in our very being, by which we are intended to live, are being so ruthlessly . . . and horribly smashed that to altogether too many of the sons of God, they do not exist at all."

Quoting from one of Westbrook Pegler's columns to the effect that "Maybe we ain't been living right," Mrs. O'Hara said the laws of right living are summed up in this statement of Jesus:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, and with thy whole soul, and with thy whole mind and with thy whole strength, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Browns Turn on Nats, 3-2, After 12-5 Lacing

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, June 23.—In the opinion of this department (which retails at 3 cents at the newstands) the Yankees still have enough ball club to win the 1940 pennant. But we hasten to add another prophecy: If the Yanks fail this season, they will be pennantless no longer than the 1941 season.

POVICH

The fact is that the Yankees have begun to feel very painfully the effects of the Clark Griffith blockade which they ridiculed, nay, even voted for at last December's league meeting. At the time, the Yanks were the superclub of the league and had reason to regard themselves as impregnable. They didn't need any new talent. Griffith's rule, which prevented the Yanks from buying star players within the league as long as they held the pennant, was laughed at—by the Yanks.

But that was in December. Came April, and Joe DiMaggio and Jake Powell were hurt. The Yanks needed an outfielder. They were forbidden to make an offer for any of a half dozen in the league they might have bought. The best they could stir up was one of their minor league farm hands—Buster Mills, who had been a previous flop with the Red Sox and Browns.

Their plight was such that they yearned for a first baseman who would get more hits than Babe Dahlgren, and a shortstop who would outbat Frankie Crosetti, owner of a .185 average. In another year, the Yankees could have flourished the fat checkbook of Col. Rupert's estate and fetched themselves ready replacements, but not this year. Griffith had attended to that.

Well, there they are now, eight games out of the lead and in fourth place. Can they make up that deficit with little more than half of the season remaining to play? They are, essentially, the same Yankee team that made a farce of the race last year. But their troubles this season are not particularly of their own making, or Griffith's.

This year the four-time Yankee pennant winner is finding it tough because they are in a tougher league. At least six of the seven other clubs in the league are far stronger teams than they were in 1939. Washington appears to be the lone exception. The league is catching up with the Yankees if, indeed, it has not already overhauled 'em. Virtually the same kind of ball they played in 1939 hasn't been good enough this season.

But it is still difficult to desert the Yankees as a pennant threat. Despite too many weak-hitting members, they have enough good ball players to take it all. Any team that boasts a DiMaggio, a Keller, a Rolfe, a Dickey and the Yankees' pitching staff cannot long remain a fourth-place ball club.

The chief difficulty of the Yankees this season has been their hitting. No longer are the Yankees tabbed as Murder, Inc. In fact, they are currently the weakest hitting club in the league with a team batting average of only .245, 20 points below the A's who are seventh in team batting. It is easy to point a finger at the Yankees' batting weakness this year.

The outstanding culprits are, of course, Crosetti, who thus far is a mere .172 hitter and not so many points below his normal stride; and Babe Dahlgren who is hitting only .215, which is no great slump for him, either. But in a year when even these two weak-hitting brethern are even weaker, other Yankees have slumped dismally. Joe DiMaggio isn't hitting .300—yet—and Bill Dickey has fallen off to .232. Thus the Yankees aren't able to carry their usual complement of weak ones. The work horses of the club are not doing their work.

But there is no complaint about that Yankee pitching staff. Red Ruffing, Spud Chandler, Monte Pearson, Marius Russo and Atley Donald are as capable a staff as any club's in the league with the exception of Cleveland's. And the Yankees' defense is still the best in the league, despite the fact they are a point behind the White Sox for the team fielding lead. On the suspicion that DiMaggio, Keller and Dickey will soon begin to pound the ball, we think the Yanks will still take it all.

If they don't they'll be back on top in 1941. The ban on Yankee purchases will be lifted at the end of this season, and then will doubtless take place a Yankee armament program that will be sensational. The Yanks won't allow themselves to be caught short-handed again. They'll pay fancy prices for the stars they want and bolster every position on the club. They don't want to feel again the effects of the Griffith-inspired blockade for years to come.

In any event, they will bring up two of their young men from Kansas City—Second Baseman Jerry Priddy and Shortstop Tony Rizzuto. Those two lads have lingered in the minors only because the Yanks didn't think they needed them. They'll install Priddy at second base and move Joe Gordon to shortstop. Rizzuto, a sure-fire big leaguer, will be traded for a first baseman to replace Dahlgren and he'll bring a good one. Anything else the Yankees need they'll buy. Their pennant famine isn't going to last long.

Crash in Game Sends Williams To Hospital

He and Finney Collide Chasing Ball; Hurts Believed but Slight

Cleveland, June 23 (AP).—Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox slugging outfielder, was knocked unconscious by a collision in the first game of today's double-header with the Cleveland Indians and forced to leave the line-up.

Revived on the field after a few minutes, he was able to walk to the dugout, and the club officials immediately sent him to Lakeside Hospital for examination. Teammates said he was badly shaken up, but apparently not hurt seriously.

The collision occurred in the eighth inning as Williams, playing in left instead of rightfield as usual, went after Ray Mack's long fly ball. Centerfielder Roger Cramer, not noticing Williams' signal for the catch, also started for it and the two crashed together. Cramer was able to recover the ball and throw it in, but his teammate sank to the ground.

Dom DiMaggio replaced Williams in the Sox line-up, but Cramer, after five minutes' delay, was able to resume play.

Twin Victory Over Giants Boosts Reds

Cincinnati Back In Lead, Winning Twin Bill, 7-4, 2-0; 52,657 Spectators

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—The biggest crowd of the season at the Polo Grounds, 52,657, saw the Cincinnati Reds play like champions today to defeat the Giants twice, by 7 to 4 and 2 to 0. By this twin victory the Reds recaptured first place for the sixth time.

Frank McCormick's triple and Bill Hershberger's fly accounted for their first run, while Mike McCormick's single, Joost's infield out and Arnovich's single tallied the final of the game.

Only two Giants got as far as third base, Babe Young in the third and Bob Seeds in the seventh.

A five-run rally in the ninth settled the first game in favor of the Reds, blasting Carl Hubbell from the box. The Reds were trailing by two runs up to that time.

Doubles by Joe Moore and Young gave the Giants their first run, but Ernie Lombardi's eighth homer tied it up. Joost's single, Werber's double and Frey's fly put the Reds ahead again only to have singles by Young and Danning and a fly by Jurges knot the count again.

Bill Jurges was hit in the head by Bucky Walters to start the Giants' seventh and Rucker ran for him. Witek sacrificed and Hubbell singled him home with hits by Whitehead and Seeds sending Hubbell across with the final Giant run.

With two out and Craft and Mike McCormick on base, Hershberger hit to center and the ball hopped away from Seeds for a triple, tying the score. Werber walked and singles by Arnovich, Frey and Frank McCormick followed to send the final three runs across.

Walker, Case Top Opening Game Attack

Each Smacks Homer, 'Gee' Goes 4-for-4; Chase Is Routed in Shortened Nightcap

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, June 23. — The St. Louis Browns and darkness caught up with the Nats late this afternoon and Washington's three-game winning streak expired in the second game of a double-header by the small but highly conclusive score of 3 to 2.

The Nats unloaded a 19-hit attack in the opening game to lift Dutch Leonard to a 12-5 victory after he had yielded four runs to the Browns in the first inning. George Case's home run into the leftfield stands with two on base at a time when the Nats were trailing, 4 to 2, was the important blow of that encounter.

Umpire George Pipgras called the second game on account of darkness after the Nats had scored a seventh-inning run. He called it with cause. That black afternoon was finally giving way to night and pitchers were scarcely discernable. In the event the Nats tied the score in that seventh inning the game could not have been permitted to continue.

Ken Chase was the loser of the second game and the chap who beat him was Chet Laabs. In the first inning Laabs hammered a 450-foot homer into the centerfield stands and in the fifth, with the score at 1 to 1, he belted a two-bagger which featured a two-run uprising.

Young Bob Harris held the Nats to seven hits. Chase gave up only six to the Browns.

George case, who opened two of the three previous games of the series with a single to leftfield, launched today's second game in that manner and the Nats took a 1-to-0 lead. However, they muffed a chance for a big inning.

Browns Tie Score

Lewis followed Case's single with a single to right, and Case scored on Gee Walker's infield out. After Bonura walked, Travis was purposely passed, to fill the bases, but Early and Myer were no help in this situation. Early popped up and Myer grounded out.

The Browns tied the score with great rapidity. Laabs hammered one of Chase's pitches for a 450-foot homer into the centerfield stands, where balls are rarely hit. McQuinn followed with a triple to left center, but Chase escaped further damage—at that time.

With the Nats held helpless by Harris, the Browns all but scored a run in the fourth inning without the aid of a hit, but a freak play saved Chase from damage. Berardino walked with one out, went to second on an infield out, stole third and then ensued one of baseball's strangest plays.

Berardino dashed for the plate on a steal of home and Chase suddenly aroused himself. His throw to catch Berardino at home was absurdly late, but he had the great good luck to hit Batter Bob Swift with the ball. Thus Berardino's run was nullified and he was sent back to third base by Umpire

Bucs Beat Dodgers, 8-5; Second Game Is 4-4 Tie

Darkness Stops Nightcap End of 13th; Homer in 9th by Spud Davis Saves Pirates, Corsairs Slug in Opener

By International News Service

New York, June 23.—The Dodgers fell back into second place in the National League today when Pittsburgh laced them, 8 to 5, in the opening game of a double-header and then held them to a 4-4 stalemate in the nightcap which was called in the fourteenth inning because of darkness.

In the first game, the Pirates pounded three pitchers for 16 hits, including three triples and a like number of doubles. The Dodgers came to life in the late innings shelling Winning Pitcher Danny MacFayden from the hill in the ninth by scoring two runs. Fireman Mace Brown was rushed to the rescue and quickly subdued the uprising. Whitlow Wyatt was charged with the loss.

In the no-contest evening fracas, Brooklyn outhit the visitors, 13 to 10, but only by virtue of Dolph Camilli's eighth-inning homer with a mate aboard were they able to gain a tie. Virgil Davis homered for

Bill Jurges Beaned By Bucky Walters; Forgives Pitcher

BILL JURGES

Jurges was placed on a stretcher and taken to the clubhouse, and and then to Polytechnic Hospital. He regained consciousness in the clubhouse, where the anxious Walters apologized and Jurges mumbled, "That's all right, Bucky; forget it."

Last Tuesday Ducky Medwick, of the Dodgers, was hit by Pitcher Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals.

The Giants said Third Baseman Glenn Stewart of their Jersey City farm will be recalled immediately to fill the gap caused by the injury.

Tabor Homers Earn Red Sox Split With Tribe

Third Sacker's Two Drives Win, 2-0; Bosox Lose First Game, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 23.—Jim Tabor placed the Boston Red Sox back in the victory column today, his two homers defeating Cleveland, 2 to 0, in the nightcap of a double-header after the league-leading Indians had grabbed the first contest, 4 ot 1.

With the victory, Boston ended a seven-game losing streak, but was forced to do so without the services of Outfielder Ted Williams, injured by a collision with Roger Cramer in the first contest.

The two crashed together while going after Ray Mack's long fly in the eighth inning, and Williams, unconscious several minutes, was taken from the game and sent to a hospital. He was not believed badly hurt, but Dr. Edward Castle, Indians' sphysician, ordered him confined over night pending the outcome of an examination.

Tabor's two homers—in the second and fifth innings—provided the only fireworks of the nightcap, which snapped Cleveland's victory string at eight. Both teams collected eight hits, but nine Indian batsmen died on bases, to the Sox's four. The win went to Herb Nash, who tightened admirably in the pinches, and Joe Dobson, relieved in the eighth, was charged with the loss.

Al Smith, Cleveland southpaw, chalked up his eighth win against a single defeat in the first game as his teammates landed on the veteran Grove for ten safe blows. Ken Keltner's homer produced an Indian run in the seventh, and Mack rounded the bases after the Williams-Cramer collision, the ball dropping in deep left-center.

Cubs Sweep Bargain Bill From Phillies

Rally Wins Opener, 3-2; Raffensberger Holds Losers in Nightcap, 7-2

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 23.—Chicago scuttled the Phillies in both ends of a double-header today, winning the first game, 3 to 2, and the nightcap, 7 to 2.

In the opener, the Cubs staged a two-run uprising in the seventh to capture the closely-fought contest. Rookie Jake Mooty won his second start by limiting Philadelphia to six scattered hits, one being a homer by Johnny Rizzo in the sixth. The Phillies started the scoring with a run in the second and the Cubs tied the game with a tally in the third. Hugh Mulcahy was the loser.

Ken Raffensberger shut out the Quakers in the nightcap until the ninth when Rizzo hit his second round-tripper to account for the Phillies' only runs. Meanwhile, Chicago pounded pitchers Walter Beck and Si Johnson for 12 hits, good for seven markers. Beck was charged with the loss.

Tigers Defeat Yankees, 9-2, In Muddy Game

Buck Newsom Hangs Up His 9th Straight; Rudy York Hits Homer

BY International News Service

Detroit, June 23.—The Detroit Tigers today bested the New York Yankees, 9 to 2, on a rain-soaked diamond.

Marv Breuer, starting for the Yanks, allowed 10 hits as Buck Newsom, touched for four safeties, won his ninth straight victory. The Tigers scored three in the fourth on Rudy York's homer, with one on, and two singles and a wild pitch. Detroit added two more in the seventh on a double, a single and a triple.

Higgins' double in the eighth, his fourth straight hit, a walk and four singles provided the Tigers with four more tallies. The fireworks ended when Steve Sundra relieved Breuer.

The Yankees staged a feeble rally in the last stanza, scoring two on a walk and two doubles. A heavy downpour before game time held attendance to 32,892.

Krakky to Take Mound in Opening Chicago Game

By a Staff Correspondent

St. Louis, June 23.—Big Joe Krakauskas will be restored to a starting role on the Nats' pitching staff tomorrow when Washington opens a three-game series at Chicago.

The hefty lefthander who has been warming the bench in semidisgrace for five weeks, gets his new chance from Bucky Harris due to a pitching emergency that has left Harris shorthanded. The Nats used seven of their eight pitchers in the last three games with the Browns.

Krakauskas will have as his pitching opponent tomorrow Ted Lyons. The second game of the Chicago series will be a night affair on Tuesday in which Sid Hudson will take the mound.

Bowman, 'Beaner' Of Medwick, Has Tables Turned

Boston, June 23 (AP).—Bob Bowman, the St. Louis' Cardinals pitcher whose "beaning" of Joe Medwick caused a furore in Brooklyn a few days ago, was a victim of the accident jinx himself today.

He was spiked by Seb Sisti, Bees' third baseman, in the first inning of the opening game of a double-header while attempting to cover first base on a slow roller to Johnny Mize.

DOWN THE SPORTS TRAIL:

'Nerves' Set Off Bomber . . . Godoy Bout Was Toughest

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 23.—Sports trail detours:

Scraps from the scrap: Cop, watching Joe Louis intently as the Bomber posed for pictures in his dressing room after giving Arturo Godoy a Chile reception, "He's the nervous type; watch his eyebrowns go up and down." That's right, he couldn't keep his hands still in the ring, either. Jack Blackburn, Louis' trainer: "Joe knows his own gait. If he misses his man early he just bides his time and waits for another chance. It was our toughest win yet. Godoy took enough punishment to kill any ordinary fighter."

Harry Balogh spared not the horses when he started to ride through the introductions of ring greats. A rumble of boos greeted the name of Jack Sharkey. "Come on up, Jack; they all love you," Harry encouraged. Harry went through his list of superlatives without backtracking once. Jim Braddock was "the popular gamester" (it sounded like gangster); Henry Armstrong was "the only fighter in the annals of fistianer to hold three titles at one and the same time." The resplendent Tony Galento gave Maxie Baer a professionally wicked glare and a hot-potato handshake. They meet soon, and business is business.

Georgraphy and stuff: Charley Walgren, the Dodgers' West Coast bush-beater, has forwarded to the home office a hearsay report of a Russian pitcher playing on a Japanese team at Kobe, Japan. If he isn't signed already, Joe Cambria must be slipping. Herman Franks, Brooklyn catcher, owns a beauty shop out in Utah, which calls for the pun of the week, to-wit: He should have a permanent job.

The Fayetteville (Ark.) Club got a total of one hit in a double-header, but split even. It won the game in which it went hitless. The Yankees are playing exhibition baseball games, which brings the caustic remark from a disgruntled fan: "Yeh, so I notice."

Ray Dumont, Wichita's semi-pro baseball tycoon, isn't stopping with a pneumatic microphone which will pop out of the ground at the national tournament to carry the remarks of arguing players and umpires to the fans. The judgement on "hit or error" of the official scorer will be posted immediately on the scoreboard. All they'll need now is another hit or error sign to use when the fans start swinging on the scorekeeper. Dumont also will present each fan opening night, August 16, with a bottle of pop, a sack of peanuts, and a cushion. That's really giving them their choice of weapons.

Billy Southworth, new Cardinal pilot, doesn't even know where his team stands from day to day. All he knows is that it's so many games below the .500 mark. "That's our goal now," he says. "When we reach that we'll start looking around." In other words, He's just doing things half-way right now. Word seeps up from North Carolina that Wallace Wade is rally going to have his Duke eleven show something in the way of open football next fall. He admits the Blue Devils will be good, which make its practically unanimous.

Nolan Defeats Overton for Maryland State Amateur Golf Title

Home Club Star Wins Match, 2 Up

Mid-Atlantic Champ Beaten for Third Time in State Finals; Miller, Bogart Bow

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

M. Parker Nolan, 39-year-old stock broker from the host Congressional Club, whose local tournament record includes many semifinal and final round performances, appeared in the winner's circle for the first time yesterday—as Maryland State Amateur champion.

The "siege-gun" hitter defeated the newly crowned Middle Atlantic titleholder from the Rolling Road Club in Catonsville, Spencer S. Overton, 2 up. The match was Overton's fourth appearance in the State amateur finals in the last five years, and his third defeat.

Nolan was 1 over par for the round, including a conceded 5-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth, and the match was one of the best title round engagements here in years. The home club star's victory ended a two-year reign of Baltimoreans as State champs, as he is the first District of Columbia titlist since Volney Burnett defeated Overton at Manor in 1937.

Advance Easily

The finalists advanced with comparatively simple morning round victories. Overton showed D. C. champion Ralph Bogart, the tournament medalist from Congressional, too many pars and birdies and won, 4 and 3, with a one-under par performance. Nolan scored, 3 and 2, over George F. Miller, of Columbia, sinking spectacular chip shots on both the ninth and tenth holes to stay in the match.

An underdog at odds of 2 to 1 and 3 to 2 in a little prematch wagering, Nolan comforted his backers by leading two up with four to play. On the fifteenth hole, Overton missed his par and Nolan had a 2½-foot putt to take a three-hole lead, with as many to play. But he missed and on the sixteenth he missed one even shorter for his par and Overton cut the lead to one. It looked like curtains for Nolan's lead on the par four seventeenth when he was over in two and flubbed his approach shot short of the green.

Here Nolan took stock of his fast-slipping lead, carefully looked over the 20 feet of green between his ball and the hole, and chipped it in the cup for a par. Overton's birdie bid missed and Nolan was one up and one to play.

Concedes Putt

They drove side-by-side on the eighteenth. Overton chipped short of the pin while Nolan went past, but Overton's birdie attempt slid to the right of the cup and he conceded Nolan's putt and the match.

Overton surprised the gallery by keeping right up with his long-hitting conqueror throughout the match. There was little difference in the tee shots and they were often so close together that Referee Wiffy Cox had to walk between the balls to see who was away.

Overton won the first hole when Nolan was trapped, but the latter squared it on the sixth when his eight-iron shot hit the cup and he dropped an easy birdie. Overton missed a partially stymied putt on the eighth to go 1 down but it was even again when Nolan was trapped on nine. The new champion missed an easy putt on the eleventh for a win but he won the twelfth when Overton obliged by doing the same. Nolan played a hit-and-run shot within inches of the pin on the thirteenth for a birdie to go 2 up, and he played another on the fourteenth to halve the hole and protect his lead. That set the stage for the four-hole finish that netted a two-hole victory.

Myers Wins

Nolan is a familiar figure to local and sectional tournament play, but previously he always met up with the bridesmaid's jinx. He was finalist in the Manor and Richmond Invitations, and semifinalist at Chevy Chase and in the Miodle Aatlantic and District championships. His only previous match play victories were scored over the same course when he won two Congressional Club championships.

Arthur Myers, the 15-year-old Manor member, saved Washington from a shutout in the lower flights when he won the fourth over Dr. E. G. Schmidt, of Bonnie View. Myers won two extra-hole matches Saturday and his margins yesterday were 1 up and 2 and 1. State Golf Association Tournament Chairman Edgar Lucas defeated Pat Winkler in the second flight finals with a first-flight brand of golf, while W. R. Parker won the third flight, and Marshal Neel, of Terra Mariae, the fifth on the twentieth hole.

Trans-Miss. Golf Won by Art Doering

Chicagoan, 23, Beats O'Hara Watts, 6 and 5, In 36-Hole Finals

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., June 23.—Poker-faced Arthur Doering, from Chicago's Medinah Country Club, won the championship of the fortieth annual Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament today by beating O'Hara Watts, of Dallas, Tex., 6 and 5, in the 36-hole finals at wind-swept Southern Hills.

The 23-year-old Chicagoan, just a year out of Stanford University, took the lead at the tenth hole and was ahead the rest of the way, outshooting the wise-cracking Dallas insurance man, who was visibly tired from the week-long grind.

It was the third straight day of 36-hole matches for both finalists but the mild-mannered Doering remained as fresh as the day he started. Watts was far from the form he displayed yesterday when he rallied sensationally to oust Walter Emery, 2 up, after being 7 down at the half-way post.

Succeeds Harbert

On his way to the title, succeeding Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., who turned professional after winning the 1939 tournament at Colorado Springs, Doering eliminated Bill Jones, of Wewoka, Okla.; Evans Dunn, of Tulsa.; Don Schumacher, of Dallas, former champion and one of the comedalists; Jack Munger, of Dallas, and J. C. Hamilton, jr., or Oklahoma City.

Before firing a two-under-par 69 on the last 18 to take out Emery in an amazing comeback in the semifinals, Watts eliminated Bob Price, of Oklahoma City; C. W. Harrington, of Tulsa; Johnny Dawson, of Hollywood, another former champion, and George Coleman, of Miami, Okla.

Wirt Gill's Snipe Wins Columbia Cup

Wirt Gill's Snipe, Columbia, took the Columbia Yacht Club's Cup yesterday in a two-race series ending the club's annual regatta, which saw four boats tied for third place. Gill's score for the regatta was 32 1-3 points.

The morning race was sailed once over a 2½-mile dogleg course off Hains Point in a near-calm which held Gill's time for the event to 49.1. In the afternoon, sailing twice over the same course for 5 miles, a spanking breeze clipped the time for the 15 boats almost in half, Gill's Columbia doing the course in 35:36.

Second place in the regatta was captured by Gaines Palmes' Iris, which amassed 31 1-5 points. Four boats with 25 points each which tied for third place were Whippet, Phelps Hunt; Frances, Howard W. Brent; Patricia Ann, George Cox, and Miji, Jean Moser.

After the regatta, Columbia's flag was formally raised on the clubhouse staff and the Columbia Sea Scouts launched the 300-foot whaleboat, Columbian. Their boat, presented by the Government, was once a lifeboat on the cruiser Omaha.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

During the past year, at any gathering of anglers, the conversation sooner or later has turned to the new synthetic leaders made of nylon yarn, the way to tie them, and, their propensity for coming loose. We have noticed more than a few having trouble this spring in keeping their flies on, and because there seems little likelihood of ever getting real gut any more. It is time every fisherman learns the synthetic leaders.

ACKERMAN

There are three knots that stand out above all others, and this is after considerable testing in the research laboratories. They are the "Turle," the "Figure Eight," and the "Return." None of the others have the staying power of these three, after greater stress than any in angling was placed upon them without their showing the slightest tendency to slip. The tiniest trout flies were securely tied as well as the largest of bass bugs.

The "Turle" is tied by making a simple slip knot after the leader tippet has been passed through the eye of the hook. When the slip knot is tied up tightly, the large loop is passed over the fly or bug and the whole pulled tight.

In the "Figure Eight," or Wemyss knot, the tippett end is passed through the eye of the hook then looped back around the standing part of the leader. The end is carried over to form a second loop and forward again to pass through the first loop. It actually forms a figure eight around the standing portion of the line, and is so named because of this figure.

The "return" knot is the most difficult of the three, but it is also, according to our personal ideas, the best and strongest. The leader is passed through the eye of the hook, down behind the hook and up the front to form one loop over which a second turn forms another, both being held open with the thumb and forefinger while the end is passed around the standing part of the leader and back under both loops, which must be pushed over the eye of the hook as it is drawn tight.

Tests also show that the barrel knot is entirely satisfactory for tying broken nylon leaders together. The barrel knot is two or more rolls over the standing parts of the leader with both ends, which are then tucked through the first roll.

We have found the new leaders to be smaller in diameter for the same strength, of even diameter, and with as low a visibility in the water as any leaders we have ever used. They do not have the sheen of natural gut, and will not fray or split. But above all, for the angler who forgets to soak his leaders over night as was always necessary with gut, there is no penalty, for the synthetic leaders can be tied dry, and cast dry. They will also straighten dry by pulling through the thumb and forefinger.

With the increasing use of flyrods for freshwater fish, and for many marine fish also, many anglers who in the past tied plugs directly to the line used with baitcasting tackle, are learning the value of invisible leaders. They are good practice for fishing for any species without teeth.

College Net Meet Today Attracts 67

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., June 23.—A field of 67 of the Nation's outstanding college tennis players paired off today for the fifty-sixth annual intercollegiate tournament, with Don McNeill, of Kenyon (Ohio) College in top-seeded position.

McNeill, ranked third nationally, drew a first-round bye. He is scheduled to meet Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., tomorrow in Chicago for national clay courts title, about the time play gets under way here on the Merion Cricket Club courts.

Joe Hunt, of the U. S. Naval Academy, who was a member of the Davis Cup doubles' team, the seeded No. 2 player, will meet Peter Shonk, of Williams, in the opening round. Frank Guernsey, of Rice, seeded No. 3, and Clifford Owen, of Westchester State, both drew first-round byes and will meet in the second round. Guernsey is defending the crown he has won the past two years.

The only Eastern player seeded was the University of Pennsylvania's Isadore Bellis, No. 8.

Ted Schroeder, of the University of Southern California, was seeded No. 4; Bob Peacock, of California, No. 5; Bill Talbert, of University of Cincinnati, No. 6; Bill Gillespie, University of Miami, No. 7.

California has a chance to retire the team trophy, put up in 1934 for the first aggregation to run up 18 points. The Golden Bears have 14 points, with Southern California trailing by one.

Star Players Of 40 Colleges Seek Golf Title

By the United Press

Manchester, Vt., June 23.—Players representing about 40 colleges start competition tomorrow for team and individual titles in the National Intercollegiate Golf Championships on the famed Ekwanok course.

Stanford will defend team honors won last year on the Wakonda course at Des Moines, Iowa., in a close battle with Northwestern and Princeton. Warren Berl, low scorer in last year's qualifying test, and two teammates who helped win the title, will compete.

Strongest contenders for the individual title were Robert N. Babbish, of Detroit, finalist in 1938, and former Western amateur champion; Robert Palmer, Michigan captain; Billy Gilbert, Ohio State sophomore and Big Ten titlist; Eddie Meister, of Yale; Stuart Alexander, of Duke, and Billy Hall, of Iowa State.

Louisiana State, Southern and Southeastern intercollegiate titlist, was expected to give Stanford a stiff rub for the team championship. The Tigers set a new record in the Southern tournament. Illinois and Georgetown also were listed as strong contenders.

Johnny Burke, captain of Georgetown's Eastern champions and winner of this tournament two years ago, will lead the Hoya delegation that includes Billy Shea, Buddy Sharkey and Ray Higgins.

Walter Hagen, jr., son of the veteran professional, will lead the Notre Dame team. Young Hagen recently won the Indiana intercollegiate crown.

George Deyoe Wins at Skeet

Special Dispatch to The Post

Stratford, Conn., June 23.—Big George Deyoe, of the Capital City Gun Club of Washington, D. C., won honors in the class AA division of the twelfth Great Eastern skeet shoot here today. He missed by one bird being in the running for the all-bore title when he shot a 99 and it took a double shoot-off with Dick Shaughnessy, of Dedham, Mass. before Deyoe took the class honors. Both broke 25 straight in the first extra round and then Shaughnessy dropped two birds against a 24 for Deyoe in the second additional series.

Bob Canfield, of Locust Valley, Long Island, won the title after beating Dr. R. F. Westermeier, of Buffalo, N. Y., in a shoot-off, 25 to 23. Both had shot 100 straight in the regular event.

The Hilltop Gun Club of Holliston, Mass., won the team title with a new record of 494. The National Telegraphic title went to the Gilmore Red Lions, of Santa Monica, Calif., with 494.

Hillcrest Winner

Truer Grid Statistics Made Possible by Score Standardization

Committee Ends Press Box Blocking

Gains to Be Counted From Scrimmage; Pass Rules Changed By Pair of Experts

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, June 23.—Here's a friendly tip for the gridiron hero who'll start after All-America football honors this fall—you'll be on your own more than ever and won't get much "blocking" from the statistician in the press box.

That was the general impression which came out of this week-end's session of the American Football Rule Subcommittee on standardizing football statistics.

Records Truer

Chairman George Veenker, of Iowa State, and Harry Stuhldreher, grid coach and athletics director at Wisconsin, went into the problem at length—and both believe a big step has been taken toward placing a truer value on performance and eliminating much synthetic record ballyhoo.

Veenker and Stuhldreher evolved the first standardized statistics form after surveying opinions of coaches, officials and writers from coast to coast. It will be distributed to schools this fall with the recommendation that the men who keep game records follow it closely. Veenker and Stuhldreher know changes will be made in the form but hope that within a few seasons collegiate football may have a real "box score" which will give a fair break to all players and teams—large schools or small.

Starts at Scrimmage

The subcommittee decided that all rushing yardage must be measured from the scrimmage line to the point were the ball is declared dead. In some cases, it was discovered, some schools were producing backs with huge yardage averages because their runs were being measured from the spot where they took the pass from center.

In the future, losses resulting from players thrown as they fade back to pass will be charged against the rushing total, rather than as a passing loss, the committee deciding that until a pass actually is thrown the play must be considered a rushing play.

There also will be no pass completions by penalty. If on a pass play a penalty is awarded for interference, the gain on the play will be charged against the defensive team.

Kick Fall-off Likely

There is likely to be a sharp fall-off in the number of "60 yard average" punters. Some statisticians, it was found, were measuring punts from the point of kick to the point where the ball stopped bouncing, be it in the end zones or in the fifteenth row of seats. Punts, it was decided, should be measured from the line of scrimmage to the point of farthest advance if the ball remains in the field of play or goes out of bounds.

When the ball goes over the goal line the punt will be measured from the scrimmage line to the 20-yard line only—because the ball is brought out to that line after a punt touchback.

First downs will not be credited on touchdown runs, the committee deciding there has been too much emphasis on first down totals when the object of the game is to score touchdowns.

Chicago, June 23 (INS).—Signing of Clyde Douglas (Bulldog) Turner, of Sweetwater, Tex., 235-pound center whose play on the Hardin-Simmons College team last fall earned him All-American honors, was announced today by George Halas, coach and owner of the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

$15,000 Allotted To Improve Track At Cumberland

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, Md., June 23.—A $15,000 improvement program has been started at the Cumberland Fair Grounds in preparation for the annual meeting and agricultural exhibit of the Cumberland Fair Association, Inc., which begins August 6.

Harry A. Manley, president and general manager, said the improvements would include installation of a totalizing board to record bets at Fairgo Track; a rebuilt pari-mutuel department containing 101 selling and cashier windows; a photo-finish camera; new Puett electric starting gate.

Race Secretary Edward Brennan in Baltimore has received applications for stalls for 800 horses Manley said, but many requests were rejected because only 490 horses can be accommodated.

Bill Bennings

—At The Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

One of the colored trainers had a horse far down the list for a race last week. He prayed all night for rain. If the track became muddy, that was what his horse liked. In addition, the off going probably would cause enough scratches to get his steed into action. The next morning his prayers were answered for there was a terrific downpour. However, the scratches he anticipated did not materialize and his horse was forced to idle. "Serves me right," he moaned that afternoon, "I prays for rain, gits it and all it causes me is misery. Look at this." And he displayed a hole in his shoe. If you wondered why the horse Zyozzie was scratched last Saturday after the betting began, here's the lowdown: The markings on her face did not correspond identically with the description on the registration certificate. While the stewards did not believe the horse other than represented, it was deemed best to check thoroughly before allowing her to start. Of course, bets were refunded. Harry F. Anslinger, narcotics chief, was a visitor last week-end. But only in the role of a spectator, he said. Tommy Sullivan came over from Laurel and brought John Maddock's Puddles and Free Ride for racing here. Jockeys Bletzacker and Haber are staging their own little private war. Vessell certainly pulled a form flip-flop with Best Policy and, from the betting, it looked as if the boys in Cumberland got well. Seldom in the history of this track has a horse made a stretch run like that shown here Saturday by Spotless. Backers were willing to tear up their tickets when the field turned for home with Spotless far back and well hemmed in by horses. Jockey Jack Mayer engineered the drive and sent the favorite players home happy. After the infield is fixed up, I would like to see a row of Lombardy poplar trees along the backstretch from the 4½ furlong chute to the start of the bluegrass pasture. But I should be picking winners and not trying to landscape. Speaking of winners, business has picked up. Or haven't you noticed? See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Mariyah ran a fair of dull races at Delaware Park before being shipped here. Previous to that she turned in a good effort at Pimlico that, if repeated, would win this heat. I'm going to string along. Grand Waltz is far down the list, but would be dangerous if in action. The same goes for Single Play. The Bennings Stable has Taradiddle on the reserve list and the little gal will give a good account of herself.

Second race—Kai Min was messed about going to the turn in that last. With better racing luck, this could be the right one. Mighty Busy's two recent tests have been encouraging. Vee Eight was second in good company.

Third race—Barraca lost a shot in that last race. May make this a winning effort. Timetta returns to a route that suits after a dull distance effort. Deserves attention. Happy Miracle has shown two good outings.

Fourth race—Americe was carried to the outside fence at the first turn in that recent race. Before that this gelding won over a heavy track. Could be the right one. Ace of Trumps has been fairly successful hereabouts and is dangerous. Flickamaru has been scratched repeatedly.

Fifth race—Red Wrack downed some of the best here in that last and gets the best of the weights. Consistent takes off 5, and I'm leaving that last to the birds. Vendor's Lien is fit as they make them, but seems overweighted.

Sixth race—Allen Caid, despite picking up 8 pounds, should take care of this field. Palumbo will do the riding. Darby Du has been consistent and is a threat. Spotless, if sent back, would be right there off Saturday's effort.

Seventh race—Lady Buck is regaining best form and could be ready to turn back a field of this caliber. Roving Eye has done about everything asked and is a threat despite 123 pounds. Never Home is a dangerous contender.

Eighth race—Never Idol gets the call if the track stays fast. If the mud comes, I prefer Goodwin, one who is dropping down. Chief Evergreen will be a keen factor if the track is off. The hard surface made him sore last out.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Chilleevallee, Sail By and Star Mint. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Margie Wrack, Sundrops and Geodesian.

Best Bet—Red Wrack.

Comic Drills of Galento, Baer Have Louis Rolling in Aisle

Champion Greatly Amused as Hilarious Pair Clown in Training; Wouldn't Miss Bout

United Press Sports Writer.

Summit, N. J., June 23.—With Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis a guffawing spectator, preparations for the Galento-Baer comic opera of clout on July 2 attained a new peak of hilarity during the week-end.

Maxie and Fat Tony rose to such heights of goofiness at their respective training camps that they brought stitches to the side of Louis, who belted both out in the fourth round of previous engagements.

Bomber Joe spent yesterday and today watching the ring's two foremost clowns in action, before going to Atlantic City for a vacation. When he left Galento's camp here at Summit, this evening, he said:

"I'm going to stay back here in the East until Tony and Maxie fight. I wouldn't miss it for anything. My-oh-my. Will that be something."

After sparring four rounds with two mates for this battle of buffoons at Jersey City, Two-ton Tony put on a show for Louis, a large brigade of boxing writers and nearly 1,000 spectators, including Promoter Mike Jacobs and Abe Greene, the New Jersey boxing commissioner. Keeping up a running fire of patter with Louis and various fans, Galento revealed how feeble he would be when the recruiting officer comes to get him for the Army, how he will dance the rhumba and conga with Madeline Carroll, and how a man with the gout skips the rope. He put on a good show.

When informed that Baer had given him the new name of "Pig Eye" yesterday, Tony gave Baer a thorough and torrid tongue-lashing and wound up by baptizing the Livermore Lothario "Peanut Heart."

Tony's show was on a par with Baer's wrestling "rhumb show" at Pompton Lakes yesterday—with Sparmate Joe Banovic, a fat, blubbery chap. They went through all the grunting, groaning, gesticulations of professional wrestlers, getting tangled up in the ring ropes, etc. Louis, who never had witnessed anything like this at a training camp, almost rolling off his chair with laughter.

Nats Defeat Browns, 12-5, Lose 2d, 3-2

Walker, Case Homer To Help Leonard Capture Opener

Taft's All Over Here

Chase escaped that fourth inning without damage, but he didn't escape the fifth. Then it was that the Browns won the ball game. With one out, Chet Laabs doubled down the leftfield line, and went to third when Chase deflected McQuinn's smash into the box out of Pofahl's reach. Clift walked to fill the bases, and Hoag fetched a run home with a squeeze bunt to Bonura. A second run scored when Berardino lined out to Walker.

The Nats, who were held to four hits by young Harris in the first six innings, suddenly got the tying run on base in the seventh after two were out. With darkness threatening to stop the game at any moment, Lewis doubled to center and Walker scored him with a single to right to cut the Browns lead to 3-2. Bonura delivered a single against the rightfield wall to move Walker to third but Roy Cullenbine sealed the Browns' triumph by making a sensational one-hand backhand catch of Travis' foul drive near the centerfield wall.

Leonard Off Badly

In that first game, Dutch Leonard got away to a exceedingly sour start with the Browns assaulting him for four runs in the first inning, but the Nats rescued him with an amazing counteroffensive.

Nineteen hits rocketed off the Nats' bats as they came from behind to reclaim the lead for Leonard before the game was four innings old. They pounded Roxie Lawson and George Coffman out of the box. Gerald Walker and Cecil Travis collected four consecutive hits. George Case pounded out three. Not a Nat went hitless.

A fumble by Buddy Myer on Leonard's first pitch of the game inspired the Browns' first-inning uprising and they bounded into a 4-0 lead before Leonard could get 'em out. Cullenbine, who reached first on Myer's muff, scored on singles by Radcliff and McQuinn, and Clift drew a walk to fill the bases. Walter Judnich doubled to right in this crisis to usher home two more runs, and a fourth scored on Berardino's infield out.

Fisher to Hurl for Stars in Red Cross Benefit

Central Ace Will Face Heurich Nine

Softball Stars Drill For Huge Sandlot Feature Saturday; Interest Mounting

By Bill Burnett

Billy Fisher the Central High star whom major league scouts call the best prospect District of Columbia high schools have turned out in years, yesterday definitely agreed to hurl for the All-District schoolboy team Saturday when it meets the Heurich Brewers during Sandlot Day at Griffith Stadium.

Sponsored by The Washington Post for the benefit of the Red Cross war fund, the baseball battle will be the nightcap of a double-header, the first half of which will be given over to softball. Senate Beer ten, District champion for two straight years and a quarter-finalist in the national tournament in Chicago last year, goes up against an all-star delegation selected by Vic Baratte from his Sport Center League.

Ranks Complete

Fisher's joining the Schoolboy ranks just about completes the list of sandlotters, schoolboys, officials and businessmen giving full support to the Red Cross affair. The stadium has been contributed free of charge by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats. Umpires have offered their services for both games gratis, and Washington's amateur baseball fans are expected to turn out en masse.

Only recently returned to town after a lengthy tryout with the Detroit Tigers, Fisher probably ranks as the Schoolboy's main hope against Heurich's sluggers. His control and speed were such that public school foes throughout the past year went to bat in a more or less hopeless frame of mind. It isn't too far-fetched to believe he can shackle Heurich with little more trouble.

Baratte Satisfied

On the softball side of the picture, Baratte sent his squad of stars through a workout at Edgewood Field yesterday, confiding afterward that "they'll do!" Hurler for the "Softies" will be "Bump" Simonds, 18-year-old right-hander, who will face Senate's veteran Abe Rosenfield.

Tickets for one of the biggest sandlot features Washington fans have seen go on sale tonight at all downtown sports good stores and The Washington Post sports department.

Bees Surprise Surging Cards, Win, 7-5, 10-5

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 23.—Boston's Bees put an abrupt halt to the surge of the St. Louis Cardinals today by sweeping both ends of a double-header, 7-5 and 10-5, to climb out of the National League cellar as the Phillies dropped a pair to the Chicago Cubs.

The Bees captured the first when they combined six-hit pitching by Manuel Salvo with a four-run seventh inning to wipe out the 5-3 lead held by the Cardinals. In the second, Joe Sullivan kept eight Cardinal hits well scattered while his mates produced two four-run clusters in a contest called at the end of the eighth by the Sunday baseball curfew.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Dutch Leonard and George Case improve their standings greatly in the Man of the Month contest following their performances yesterday in the double-header at St. Louis. Points was distributed as follows:

To Leonard, eight points, because he kept the Nats in the first game by allowing only one run in the last eight innings and won his game.

To George Case, eight points, because he hit a home run in the first game with two on base at a time when the Nats were trailing by two runs and because he opened the second game with a single that brought the Nats a run.

To Gerald Walker, five points, because he made four consecutive hits including a homer in the first game, and because he played a smashing defensive game and made a hit in the second contest.

To Cecil Travis, five points, because he made four hits in the first game and played a brilliant game at third base.

To Charley Gelbert, two points, because he made two important hits in the first game.

To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he hit the ball hard all afternoon despite making only two hits.

To Buddy Lewis, three points, because he made three of the Nats' hits in the second game.

Grays Capture Bargain Bill At Stadium

"Cum" Posey's Grays, local entry in the Negro National League, annexed a double-header yesterday at Griffith Stadium, at the expense of the Philadelphia Stars, copping the opener, 3-2, and running away with the nightcap, 7-3.

West drove Campbell home in the first with a hit past Dunn at third, to put the Stars in front in the opener. But Buck Leonard came back in the Gray's half-inning and sent a scorching triple to the rightfield wall, scoring Watley for a 1-1 tie.

Neither team scored again until the ninth, when Cooper hit to centerfield, took second on Benjamin's slow return, and came home when the ball got away from Gaston. Again the count was tied at 2-all when Easterling got a two-bagger which Benson was barely able to reach in centerfield, and came home on Gaston's slow roller to third.

The tie was broken in the Grays' tenth as Pitcher Brown started off with a triple to the rightfield wall and scored on Judd Wilson's scorching liner over second after the bases were loaded.

The Grays sewed up the nightcap in the second and third innings. Carlisle's two-bagger off Dunn's glove drove Easterling across the plate, and Jelli Jaxon's double brought Carlisle home in the second.

In the third Buck Leonard's hot liner past West scored Benjamin, and Easterling's double brought Buck Leonard and Judd Wilson over the plate. The Grays were never headed thereafter. Hamilton let the Stars down with four hits.

The Grays will meet the New York Black Yankees at Griffith Stadium next Sunday, the first game of the double-header being at 2 o'clock.

Nat'l Capital Race Confused By Deadlocks

Flood, Klein Tie For A Section Lead; B Top Spot Shared, Too

Deadlocks for the lead were the common thing in the National City Baseball League yesterday, as the first-half race drew near its close.

J. C. Flood earned a tie with Klein Tavern in its final A Section game, beating Miller Furniture, 10-9, on the strength of Hymie Perlo's pinch single in the ninth. Flood and Klein will meet next Sunday on the Ellipse in a one-game playoff, the winner taking first-half honors.

In B Section, St. Francis Xavier and Plaza Tile continued in a stalemate for the top position when each won its outing yesterday. A no-hit, no-run game was hurled by St. Francis' Tommy Hutchinson as he turned back Washington Home, 7-0, in eight innings. Only four men reached first base, two on walks and two on errors.

Plaza's triumph came over Variety A. C., 14-2. The Tile nine and St. Francis thus look to their regularly scheduled game next Sunday to decide the loop title.

Feature of Junior Division action was Naiman Photo's 3-0 shutout of Cardinal A. C. Dick Price hurled a four-hitter, while the batting stars were Les Wicklein, Bob Mulvihill and Wallis.

Guns Or Gadgets?

By Roger W. Babson

Real or Fake Security?

ROGER W. BABSON

THE BIG ISSUE facing America today is: Real Security vs. Fake Security. Everyone now realizes that this country must annually spend billions of dollars on defense. Yet, for ten years the United States has failed to balance its budget, due to relief, farm aid and so-called "social security" costs. We cannot add the defense billions to the relief billions. We must choose between guns and gadgets; between personal or "social" security. With defense expenditures rising, "New Deal" expenditures must be slashed.

When I was in Europe two years ago, some of Hitler's aides prophesied accurately that he had the power to push the Allies around while they were unwilling to strip for a real fight. England finally stripped, as shown by the recent dictatorship, and at last decided to "come out fighting." France trod the same path, but faced dictatorship with reluctance, even when the situation became desperate. She clung to the eight-hour day as a sop to labor and retained 3 per cent interest for investors, crushing the middle class as between the jaws of a vise. England and France saw the need of getting guns, but refused to give up "gadgets."

* * *

THE ALLIES' weak, stupid and stubborn delay in resorting to self-sacrifice had the effect of disarming the democracies. Two precious, priceless years were lost, wasted in dilly-dallying and delusions that security somehow could be won without paying the price. We live today in a world where no nation has the privilege of choosing between free-and-easy indulgence and resolute devotion to duties. The only alternative is between dictation by force from without and self-discipline developed from within.

The cold realism of what the Germans in 1938 told me about the Allies has a ruthless application to America today. Just as England and France were at last driven to strip for the necessities of warfare, so the United States will be driven to strip for the necessities of defense. Any other policy on our part will give us only "phoney" defenses, fit only for phoney wars. Recent history gives proof that any country which makes ready merely for military defense is preparing itself for defeat. Hope of securtiy demands also the upbuilding of national character into more heroic stature.

* * *

NEVER FORGET that here in the United States we must be prepared for the possibility that the Axis powers, including Japan, will gang up against America. We must take steps not only to protect ourselves against infiltration, or the secret sapping of our strength by fifth columns, but must revamp our attitude toward leisure, waste and behavior. Tanks, planes, battleships and other material armor can be built in less time than it takes to erect moral defenses and rearm the national spirit. This means that a spiritual awakening must accompany any successful defense program, and that such effort should start at once.

If the Germans listened to our President's fireside talk of several weeks ago, they were uneasy when he referred to the vast productive capacity of American industry. But Nazi listeners heard our President go on to express the hope that we could do two things at the same time: First, push our defense plans; second, keep our "superluxuries." By "superluxuries" I refer to hour and wage benefits, old-age pensions, farm bounties, indiscriminate relief and other sops and paps. Such hopes are reminiscent of the blasted ideas once entertained in Allied nations.

* * *

YES, WHEN German ears were tuned to that fireside talk, my guess is that German mouths began to grin and German eyes began to glitter. Full well it is known by realists that the desire for both New Deals and new defenses was what cracked the preparedness programs of other victims. They tried to provide themselves with both guns and gadgets. The same fateful blunder may yet imperil America, if we are unwilling to choose between national protection and economic pampering. The years 1940 and 1941 may be as decisive to American defense as the years 1938 and 1939 were to Allied defense. Are we to reenact the tragic futilities of Europe?

* * *

You can help yourself and your country more by thinking and acting upon these fundamental facts than you can by hanging morbidly over your radio and listening to nothing but war "news." Certainly, our retail sales, industrial production, employment, buying power, and defense preparations are not helped by this 1940 craze for broadcast brooding. Vast events, such as are now occurring in Europe and Asia, may affect America in two ways: We can feel the chill of blind panic, selfish forebodings and a childish terror of losing our luxuries. Or (2) we may "take it" with the thrill of sacrifice, self-denial, and the courage and character to save America first.

* * *

TELL ME HOW the majority of the population will react to these spiritual alternatives, and I will forecast the effects upon our economic life of the historic events now unfolding. I ask that we be realistic, cut out hypocrisy and realize what honest defense really requires. The truth I preach may not be popular, but someone must summon the courage and candor to bring home these facts to our people. Time is running out. We cannot afford further to straddle and dodge. The choice which we can no longer evade may decide the future of America. It will write history not only "in our time," but for generations still to come.

Brewers Beat Annapolis, 2-1

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, June 23.—The Heurich Brewers scored a run in the tenth inning to beat Annapolis, 2 to 1, at Annapolis today.

G. Townshend's hamer in the eighth inning tied the score for Annapolis after the Brewers were ahead on Huck Stahl's circuit clout in the fourth. Jesse James, Beerman pitcher, singled to left field to open the tenth. Kaufman was safe when Danny Danbacker, Annapolis second-sacker, dropped Bailey's throw James was called out by Umpire McNally, but Oscar Johnson, umpire behind the plate, reversed the decision, claiming the ball was not held long enough for the put out. Frank Brewer then singled to left field to send James across the plate with the winning run.

Tip From Birds Might Cure War, Biological Survey Hints

New Pamphlet Gives Rise to Theory That 'Strutzkreig' Could Replace 'Blitzkreig,' if Given Full Sway

Even the male birds up in Maine are strutting these days, according to a leaflet entitled "Game Birds in Maine," announced by officials of the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Interior Department. On this announcement theoreticians yesterday launched into discussions of curing war by allowing more male strutting.

Prepared by Clarence Aldous, of the Biological Survey, and H. L. Mendall, of the University of Maine, the leaflet goes on to say that, almost without exception, the males "have feathers of gaudy colors, while the females are usually of drab hue."

Which opened the way for some prejudiced, unscientific conjecturing and renewed an old argument as to wether the male or the female of the human species does the more strutting. Each sex accused the other, in a little armchair interviewing done yesterday.

The clash of opinion simmered down to the fact that males admit they would strut if they had the chance. But what chance have baggy trousers and a scraped beard against brightly colored dresses, lipstick and silkstockings?

"Give us an equal chance with male birds, beasts and fish, and we'll do some real strutting," said one male. "Let men be colorful and women drab for awhile and it will solve all the world's problems."

Males would be so busy strutting before drab females that there would be no time for wars and no employment, since men would be perpetually unemployed in order to have time for strutting, the theoretician continued. He even based the cause of the present war on a "strut complex" possessed by dictators who subjugate nations in order that more persons can watch them strut their stuff.

He said a lot of other things, too, but his voice was indistinct. Something about renaming "blitzgrieg" "strutzkrieg."

Kennedy Begs U. S. to Support Red Cross

Predicts 'Greatest Siege in History of Man' for England

Appealing "in the cause of all humanity" for the American public's support of the Red Cross, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy predicted "the greatest siege in the history of man" for England, in a broadcast from London yesterday.

"We in England see the tragedy close at hand," declared the United States envoy to Great Britain. "We realize that no sacrifice can be too great for any of us to make to ease the people's suffering.

"I have faith that you in America will comprehend this, too--and act.

"Today, when the greater part of the world's energy is devoted to destruction, it is more than ever imperative that we do not lose sight of the great impulse to serve. That impulse, hate and war notwithstanding, remains one of the fundamental instincts of man."

He said funds "now at our disposal are pitiful in relation to the anticipated need" and "your fervent gratitude that your children are not now at any moment liable to be killed in their beds may well express itself in helping those who face this reality.

"I have felt its impact. Youngsters from various countries whom I have met, who visited my children, who were their friends, are wounded, or missing, or killed in action. I have sat across my desk from men and women whose eyes mirror untold pain, who have lost all trace of members of their families. Those lost ones were swallowed up in the streams of refugees that clog the roads of Europe.

"I have talked with men and women who have been through the hell of evacuation and invasion in shattered lands. They have seen and experienced things which human beings should not have to endure. Yet they have endured."

Philadelphia—Radio's greatest array of microphones—110 of them—has been mustered for coverage of the 1940 Republican National Convention in Philadelphia by the three networks, Henry Grossman, chief engineer of the Columbia Broadcasting System's special convention staff, estimated today.

More than half of the microphones are scattered through the vast Municipal Auditorium where the convention opens today. Others have been placed by the networks and local stations in special studios and booths throughout the convention city.

Use of 110 microphones for coverage of the convention was compared by Grossman to the tremendous facilities assembled for the broadcast description of the coronation of King George of England in May, 1937. For that event, Grossman said, only 58 microphones were used at the ceremonies and along the route of the royal procession through London.

In addition to the microphones, special radio equipment placed in use for the duration of the Republican convention is calculated at possibly 25 tons against 12 tons of equipment in operation for the coronation ceremonies. Mileage in wires would reach from coast to coast.

British Children's Exodus Starts Soon

London, June 23 (AP).—Geoffrey H. Shakespeare, secretary for overseas trade, expressed the hope today that the first groups of British children sent out of the country "will be proceeding overseas within about three weeks," and said they will be leaving even sooner if possible.

Shakespeare would not say how many children would be in the first group but said the Dominion governments were prepared to receive 20,000 immediately and that such a number "may be regarded as a begining."

Contract Bridge

Even experts differ as to the best method of bidding hands. Contract bridge bidding is not an exact science, in fact it is not really a science at all; it is skill, experience, psychology and flair. Thus there may be one, two or even three good ways to bid a hand.

But one way not to reach a slam was discovered to the deep chagrin of a fine young woman player of the Regency Club. Miss Penelope Winslow, who frequently wins top scores in the club's regular duplicate games, missed a small slam at spades in a recent rubber bridge tournament when it hurt most.

After the play she consulted various of the club's expects and received almost as many answers. Here is what she says about the hand:

"We were playing in the rubber bridge tournament last night and had played six or eight hands. Mr. and Mrs. George Kaufman were our opponents. They were way ahead and he remarked that all we needed was a game and a slam to win!

"We made the game and I opened the eighth and last hand. I was dealer, West, and George Kaufman was North. I saw:

◇ 5
♣ A K 9 8 6 5 4

"I bid two clubs as I wanted to insure my partner's keeping the bidding open. He answered two diamonds, and I considered mentioning the spades, but decided to plunge and bid six clubs.

"My partner laid down:

♠ Q 10 9 7
♡ K J 10 9
◇ A Q J 6 2
♣ None.

"The clubs were three and three, and George Kaufman had the king of spades and the queen of hearts. His wife had the king of diamonds, so we were down one, but could have made six spades 'cold.'

"I was furious and showed the hand to some of the experts. Ossie (Oswald Jacoby) said the bidding should have been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

"Robert McPherran said he would have bid six clubs right off. Hal Sims said my two clubs was all right, but I should have said two spades in response to the two diamonds, and then my partner could have gone to six spades. Oh, dear, I wish I had!"

CREST 'O' THE WAVE. Our town's night spots are now riding the top of one of those mysterious tidal waves of business that come from Allah knows where. They don't result from pay days, hot weather or cold wether. Apparently they're just mass contagions of people saying: "Let's go places." But they make managements, orchestras and head waiters verra happee.

OUR FAVORITE CORRESPONDENT, Ad-Man Frank Romer, writes: Dear Pen-ambulist Harris: Song manuscripts for the Tuesday composers' nights in the Neptune Room are rolling in like Roosevelt votes from a precinct where 100 per cent of the voters are on relief. Art Brown plays the winning song every day at the Capitol Theater . . . The famous Milt Herth (world's most amazing) will start next Saturday in Neptune . . . Milt Herth plays his dazzling mother-of-pearl electric organ with Liszt artistry and Cab Calloway swing . . . To prove I'm not overemphasizing, I'm inclosing one of Herth's new recordings. "Dear Senor Romer: The idea of my suspecting you of overenthusiasm! Thanx-a-lot for the record, especially the "Annabella" side.

HI HAT SWITCH. Bill Baker and his Diplomats have no sooner gotten settled in Hi Hat and begun to make friends than we hear they're going back to New York to fulfill previous engagements. They'll wind up their gay and tricky music on next Saturday. The Hi Hat management is now haunting Manhattan booking offices and promises to bring down a niftick new unit come Monday.

GLEN ECHO BULLETIN. Trumpeter-singer Harry Albertson (known as Gary Stevens on the radio) will leave Paul Kain's Glen Echo band this week to join Don Bestor's orchestra . . . "California Night" will be celebrated on Wednesday. If you're a Golden Stater, you'll receive special concessions at this fiesta. Maestro Paul Kain and most of his band are Californians and you can bet that the Spanish ballroom is going to resound with native son tunes. Be sure to go up and introduce yourself to Paul. He just loves to swap gossip about those sunny, California days.

ALBERTSON

VISITING AROUND. Patricia Ryan, former songbird in the Mayflower Lounge, visited there the other day. She was on her way to her farm near Lynchburg, where she'll spend the summer . . . Bob Chester and his band were in the Carlton last night to play the Fitch "Band Wagon" broadcast . . . Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hanby have just returned to their home in Riverdale, Md., after visiting their famous granddaughter, Kate Smith, in her Park avenue nest and enjoying all sorts of parties and World's Fairing.

THOSE OOMPH SONGS. Little Jack Little pulled up a chair in the Metronome Room the other night and said, "Do you realize we're in the midst of a cycle of sugar ballads?" To prove it, he pulled an official list of current hits out of his pocket. Out of the first 30, there was only one novelty number, "The Woodpecker Song." All hands agreed that what America needs is another "Ol' Man Mose." . . . Little Jack and his band are crowding the Metronome every night. The music strikes up at 9 p. m. and you'd better get there on the dot if you haven't reservations.

MINE (AND YOUR) HOSTS. Don Stoos, head waiter at the Lounge Riviera, is as good at golf as he is at greeting. He shoots in the 70's and recently blitzkrieged the Rainbow Room orchestra, who are pretty good golfers themselves . . . "General George" Osmolski, manager of the Anchor Room, is a Russian, but looks more like a boulevardier from Paree. He says he's going to raise a beard some day to prove he's a Russian . . . When Bob Korn isn't piloting people to choice tables on the Starlight Roof, he likes to play poker. He says he comes out even at the end of the year and has lots of fun that really costs nothing . . . Michael, of the King Cole Room, goes fishing on week-ends. He told us that he caught 35 hardhead weighing 2½ to 4 pounds at Breezy Point last week. Well, that's what he told us.

NEW BAVARIAN PIANOS. Gustav and Oscar Heintze, the double piano lads at the New Bavarian, have a background that'll make your eyes pop. They're nephews of the great composer, Anton Dvorak ("Humoresque" and "New World Symphony"). Oscar conducted three years for Max Reinhardt in Vienna. Gustav was a protege of Composer Franz Lehar ("The Merry Widow") and played in his orchestra at the age of 14.

RHYTHM RESURRECTIONS. Mayfair's patrons are happy as larks over two old tunes that Lyle Smith and his trio have dressed up in 1940 rhythms. They're "The Preacher and the Bear" and "Come Josephine, in My Flying Machine" . . . Barnee, of the Shoreham, is going to play the 1914 hit, "Too Much Mustard," being inspired thereto by The Post's Nelson Bell, who enjoyed it when Barnee's daddy, Dan Breeskin, played it on the old Raleigh Roof in the days of World War I.

DEL RIO is giving its patrons the cutest souvenirs we've seen this year—tiny jugs of rum topped with bright-colored lampshades.

OUTDOORS AND INDOORS. The Harrington Tavern, air-cooled and softly lighted and very, very quiet, continues to be a prize spot to "get away from it all" . . . And the Lee Stables on Riverside Drive is another perfect place for taking it easy. Just sit and watch the river and the world go by . . . The Nightingale, a few miles below Alexandria, is just the right distance for a pleasant drive and the new Rod Raffell directed orchestra his rhythm and melody plus.

Laborer to Face Coroner's Jury In Hit-Run Probe

A coroner's jury at 11 a. m, today will hear the details of a wild ride Saturday by Richard S. Nestlerode, 26-year old laborer, which resulted in the death of one person, injury to another and ended only after the driver had crashed into a street car after ramming several other vehicles.

Held for the jury on three charges of hit-and-run as well as driving while drunk, Nestlerode steadfastly maintained after questioning that "I can't remember what happened."

The inquest will be in the death of Joseph Nappo, 59, of 1250 Tenth street northwest, allegedly struck by Nestlerode at Ninth and M streets northwest. Witnesses said Nestlrode at times was going over 60 miles an hour.

Alien Registration And Fingerprinting Begins in 2 Weeks

By the Associated Press

Justice Department officials said today that they would be ready to start registration and fingerprinting of an estimated 3,500,000 aliens within two weeks.

Congress gave final approval Saturday night to legislation requiring aliens to register and bulwarked this action with approval of funds to provide about 500 more Federal Bureau of Investigation agents to combat the activity of spies and saboteurs.

In addition, Congress voted $3,100,000 to finance the alien registration program and directed that the Nation's postmasters do the registering and fingerprinting.

All the records and fingerprints will be forwarded to the FBI main office here—where about 10,000,000 fingerprints already are on file.

Officials indicated that a campaign of education so that aliens would understand what was required of them would precede the actual registration.

Pastor Says Hitler Won't Defeat God

Mr. Clark Declares This Is No Time To Black Out Faith

Today is no time for a blackout of Christian faith, the Rev. Edward O. Clark yesterday morning advised his Chevy Chase Baptist congregation.

"These very conditions call for us to hold fast to our faith in God," said the cleric, adding that a long-range view of history will prove that God is working out His eternal purposes.

"No one can justify the brutal might of Hitler," he continued, "but God is not to be defeated in His eternal purposes. God is not mocked. The time for the judgment of Hitler will come."

Calls for Repentance

Home defense may be necessary, but the first line of defense is repentance and return to God in America, Dr. Gove G. Johnson declared yesterday morning from the pulpit of National Baptist Memorial Church, Sixteenth street and Columbia road northwest.

Citing the "fear and war panic" and "mad preparation" for defense in America, Dr. Johnson said:

"Now, before any political nominations are made, let us make it distinctly understood—we will not follow any man or party into war on foreign soil."

Urges Spiritual Militancy

Preaching at Our Saviour Episcopal Church, Brookland, the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills called for a spiritually militant stand against the forces of naziism, which he charged aim at Christianity's destruction.

"As a firm believer in Christianity, it is a duty we owe to ourselves, our religion and our church to be informed and become militant against such a pagan philosophy. Our missionary zeal must match theirs."

Eccleston Rites Set for Tomorrow At Funeral Home

William W. Eccleston, 89, employed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for 69 years until his retirement two years ago, died yesterday at his home, 2000 Sixteenth street northwest.

Mr. Eccleston, who began his career with the railroad at Sykesville, Md., eventually became supervisor of transportation for its Eastern lines.

He is survived by four sons, William Graham Eccleston, of Beverley Hills, Calif.; Noel E. Eccleston, Wilber J. Eccleston, and Howard R. Eccleston, all of Washington, and one daughter, Miss Bessie Eccleston, of Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at S. H. Hines Co. funeral home. Burial will be in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

Belgium Feels Famine Approach; Blockade Hurts

Berlin, June 23 (AP).—A serious food shortage in Belgium, particularly in the rural regions, was reported today by observers in Brussels watching the little kingdom try to adjust itself to German occupation.

Belgium, which previously imported much food by sea, now is closed off by the British blockade and in the confusion of the war appears unable to adjust itself to the purely continental economy in time to replace fully the supplies formerly brought by ships.

Japan to Make Totalitarian Party Supreme

Prince Konoye Quits Council to Assume Control of Structure

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo (Monday), June 24.—Japan's internal political structure will be remodeled on completely totalitarian lines, and her foreign policy will be reoriented to strengthen the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis, it became evident today.

The totalitarian political party is expected to come into being within a matter of days. Prince Konoye, president of the privy council, resigned his post this morning to become head of the new party which will supersede all existing parties.

This far-reaching change is the direct result of the success of the European totalitarians in the present war which has led the Japanese to believe that the totalitarian system is necessary for a role of ascendency in the world as it is now being fashioned.

Indo-China Studied

Japan's foreign policy is to be propelled along Axis lines. The first task, it is admitted, must be to settle the China war and Japanese leaders are now giving much thought on the stoppage of the traffic through Indo-China and to similar interruptions of traffic to Chungking by way of Burma, negotiations for which are to be pressed with Britain.

Along with this policy, Japan has her eyes for the moment on both Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies. Should France surrender Indo-China, the Japanese hope Germany will transfer the French colony to Japan's keeping in return for a pledge that Japan will assure her totalitarian European friends a large share of Indo-China trade. If the French authorities in Indo-China, as seems likely, refuse to be bound by such terms of armistice, forceful action may be resorted to by Japan to force compliance.

Uncertain of U. S.

The fly in the Asian ointment, so far as the Japanese see it, is, of course, the continued maintenance of the American fleet in Hawaii. This, coupled with Henry L. Stimson's entry into the Cabinet, has made them uncertain of America's policy.

For the moment the Dutch East Indies issue is being left aside while attention is being concentrated more particularly on Indo-China in which, it is felt, the United States is less keenly interested and would furnish a test of American policy.

Nazi Experts Show Concern Over American Trade Bloc

Planners of 'New Order' Wonder Whether Pact Will Be Used to Fight Their Revised European Economy

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, June 23.—German economic planners upon whom devolves the duty of mapping out the economic aspects of the post-war world are viewing with interest American plans for the formation of an economic bloc of nations in the Western Hemisphere.

Their interest is aroused by the fact that this plan so very closely corresponds to the "new order" which they envisage in Europe after a German victory—their speculation centers on the question of whether the Pan American economic union will be used for cooperation with or for a blockade of the "New Europe" when the military phase of the war is over.

It is a question, they say, of whether America, truly recognizing the signs of the times, will make whether the Pan-American economic union, or whether, remaining blind to the revolutionary economic dictates of the "new order," she will use the union for the "negative" purpose of continuing the war in the economic sphere, after the guns are silenced.

In the latter case, says the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, America will be the loser. "For Europe," this paper maintains, "has no reason to fear a blockade exercised by the nations of the Western Hemisphere—such a blockade would be dangerous only to the American nations, who would find themselves with no overseas buyers for their numerous raw materials.

"For Europe," it is stated, "particularly Europe with a reorganized Africa before its doors, is not dependent on the American nations for its coffee, its cotton, its copper and its furs. These can be procured from other sources.

"But the European economic bloc will be a large consumer and will not hesitate to use its power of consumption in a circumspect manner, nor to remember in so doing the attitude which other powers maintained toward it during its period of development."

In other words, if the Pan-American nations, their economic union achieved, should attempt a blockade of a German dominated Europe, they would, according to this writer, soon find themselves being the blockaded instead of the blockaders.

America's ability to absorb all the goods and raw materials produced in such a Pan-American Union is doubted by this financial writer. He raises the question, "Could South America, already clogged with huge amounts of raw materials, afford to lose the European market? Is the United States prepared to take over South American supplies and surpluses? If so, what would it do with them? Does the United States plan to reduce its customs and tariffs and become an importing nation? Can it guarantee to the South American states that the loss of the European market will not have to be paid for by a considerable reduction of national income?

Dies, 3 Aides Off for West In Nazi Inquiry

To Assemble Reports For Reconvening Of Congress July 1

By International News Service

Launching a wide-spreading investigation of alleged Nazi fifth column activities, Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, and three members of his House committee investigating un-American activities, were en route to different parts of the West last night.

Dies left for Chicago, en route to Texas, where he willl be met by Commmitttee Secretary Robert Stripling and a number of investigators for a series of hearings which promise to bring "sensational developments," a committee attache said. Hearings are expected to open Wednesday at Austin.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, a member of the committee, went by plane to his home State to confer with investigators who have been working there.

Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois, also a committee member, went to Cleveland, then will go to Chicago. At both cities the committee has had investigators working. Mason will make a checkup and report to the committee when Congress reconvenes July 1.

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, another committee member, left on a "secret mission" in the West, his destination closely guarded by the committee. However, it was reported he also was going to Texas.

After stopping over in Chicago today, Dies will leave for Texas to open the hearings there. Several witnesses before the committee at previous hearings had charged Nazi and Communist infiltrations into this country from Mexico, and committee members, in speeches on the House floor, have warned of the dangers of fifth column activities from across the Rio Grande.

After the hearings in Texas, Dies will return to confer with the committee and summarize the members' reports of their investigations. Further hearings are expected to be held here in a few weeks.
